WORKMEN'S BILL HELD LEGAL

WORKMEN BILL VALID, MACHINE IS RULING MONOPOLY

The Massachusetts Supreme Court this afternoon rendered to the State Senate an opinion declaring that the proposed Workingmen's Compensation Act is constitutional.

This act had been passed already by the Massachusetts House of Representatives. It had received a final reading in the Senate, and action there at that stage was held up until the Supreme Court would render a decision on its constitutionality.

Delayed action on this bill is one of the reasons for prolonging the session of the Legislature. Speedy and final action by the Senate on the measure is now in order.

That an act has been drawn up for Attorney General Swift by Louis D. Brandeis to carry the Shoe Machinery Trust was made known today at the big hearing at the State House on the question of appointing a legislative committee to investigate the machinery company. The announcement was made by Charles H. Jones, president of the Commonwealth Shoe & Leather Company, who was the first speaker.

"An act has been drawn up by Mr. Brandeis for the Attorney General," said Mr. Jones, "which provides a fine of from $500 to $5,000, an imprisonment of not more than a year or both for the officers of any shoe machinery manufacturing company which operates in restraint of trade; and if the Legislature will pass this act it will give the shoe manufacturers the relief they need."

Over 300 at Hearing.

The hearing was one of the largest held this year on Beacon Hill. There were over 300 people present, shoe manufacturers from all over the State being on hand, together with officers of the United Company headed by President Sydney W. Winslow and Charles F. Choate, his counsel.

Mr. Jones and other manufacturers and former Senator James H. Vahey denounced the company as a monopoly and declared that the present law on the books, passed in 1907, protects only the company and leaves the manufacturer at the mercy of the trust.

Former State Senator Frank Selbertich, speaking as a stockholder in the United Company, denounced the pro-monopoly legislation and Governor Foss's special shoe machinery messages as "political moves."

There was a hot passage-at-arms between Mr. Jones and Representatives James F. Cavanagh of Everett, who surprised his friends by "heckling" the speaker with questions based on the United Company's contentions. Mr. Jones kept his temper for awhile and then he turned on Cavanagh and lectured him for half an hour.

People Aroused, Says Jones.

Norman E. White, gubernatorial candidate and a member of the committee, wanted to know why the manufacturers had not asked for legislation before the close of the session. Mr. Jones said there was not public interest enough, but now that the Governor had taken a hand he thought the public had been aroused.

"Oh, I don't think so," said Mr. White, and this caused a big laugh.

The principal speech was made by Mr. Jones, representing the shoe manufacturers.

"The United company has a monopoly," he said, "and they possess control of all the essential machines for shoe making. We must either lease their machines or go out of business. We must pay royalties to them on patents which have expired. We pay from $1,000 to $1,700 a year lease on each machine, and we must lease them for seventeen years.

"The legislation of 1907 helped only the United company. They can take out machines on thirty days' notice. The manufacturer can do nothing. He should have the same right. The law gives him at the mercy of the trust. The new act which has been drawn up gives the relief needed and makes the old law efficient and enforcible.

Sell for $500; Lease for $20,000.

In defining the difference between royalty machines and those purchased outright, Mr. Jones stated that the seventeen-year welting machine, which probably costs the United Shoe Machinery Company $250 to manufacture, is sold outright in England for $500. In this country the same machines are installed in a factory on a royalty system, amounting to from $1,200 to $1,500 per year for a seventeen-year lease. "And at the end of the lease we cannot purchase them," he declared with emphasis.

"Why," asked one of the committeemen "do you not buy the machine in England?"

"Because if we did," replied Mr. Jones, "the United Shoe Machinery Corporation would take out our other important machines furnished us on a royalty basis."

Mr. Jones stated he would have used Thomas G. Plant's machines if he would have agreed to continue the manufacture of his machines. It was thought Plant's machines were put on the market the royalty system of the United would have been seriously injured.

WOMAN INJURED IN THREE-STORY FALL

James Hanson was awakened in his third floor flat at No. 82 Hanson street early to-day by a sound as of someone landing heavily on the sidewalk below. He missed his wife. Looking out the window he saw her on the sidewalk. When he got to her she was nearly unconscious. She was taken to the City Hospital, where it was found that her injuries are so serious as to endanger her life.

Mr. Hanson says that his wife was greatly worried because a bill which they had to pay threatened to deprive them and their three children of their vacation. Mr. Hanson thinks that she walked to the window in her sleep and fell out.

BAILEY WILL LEAVE LORIMER COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Senator Bailey to-day asked to be released from further service on the Committee on Privileges and Elections. The Texas Senator offered no explanation for his desire to quit the committee, but his request was granted by unanimous consent of the Senate. It is believed his action was due to charges that he was responsible for the vote sustaining Senator Lorimer at the last session.

SECRETARY FISHER GOING TO ALASKA

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Walter Fisher, secretary of the interior, will begin at Chicago on August 2 his tour of inspection to Alaska, where he will attempt to gain at first hand knowledge of the situation in that territory, particularly with respect to the possibility of monopolizing Controller bay as a harbor for the outlet of coal from the Bering river fields.

HARBOR TUNNEL BILL IS KILLED

The bill for a new tunnel under Boston harbor between the South Station and East Boston was killed for this session in the House of Representatives to-day. Defeat was administered on a voice vote. Washburn of Worcester tried hard to have the tunnel bill substituted for an adverse report from the Committee on Railroads.

HUNDREDS KILLED BY CHINESE FLOODS

SHANGHAI, July 27.—Hundreds dead, thousands homeless and scores of villages swept away is the record for floods which have been raging in the Yang Tse Kiang valley for the last twenty-four hours. At Chang-Te-Fu reddish walls, houses and sythousands of acres were inundated.

LABORERS IN RIOT, POLICE ARE CALLED

BROCKTON, July 27.—Claiming that pay for work they did for the company was due to-day, over fifty Italian laborers gathered in front of the office of the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company to-day and attacked the building. Superintendent Conway was badly handled, and the laborers made such threats that the police were called to disperse them.

40 GIRLS FLEE $15,000 FIRE

Forty girls, working in the plant of the Riverside Laundry Company at Concord Junction, fled from the building to-day, barely in time to escape flames. Fire had started in the second story of the building and was burning down through the first floor ceiling before it was discovered. The flames and smoke were sweeping through the first floor a few moments after the last employe got out. The damage plant was burned to the ground at a loss of $15,000.

COLUMBUS MEMORIAL BIDS ARE RECEIVED

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Preparations for a magnificent memorial fountain to Christopher Columbus on the plaza of the new union station here received impetus with the opening of bids for its construction. Arthur L. Smith & Company of this city was the lowest of twelve bidders, offering to erect the memorial in granite, complete except the plumbing, for $90,000 or in marble for $48,401. The lowest bidder for the plumbing was Norcross Brothers & Company, Worcester, Mass., at $2,900.

ASKS $200,000,000 FOR NATION'S ROADS

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The roads of the country will be benefited to the extent of $200,000,000 during the next five years if the House adopts and the Senate and President then approve a resolution which Representative French of Idaho has introduced. It provides for an expenditure of $20,000,000 by the government for five successive years, the States to add an equal amount for improving their roads.

HENRY E. CONANT DEAD AT CONCORD

CONCORD, N. H., July 27.—Henry E. Conant, department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic of New Hampshire and past grand commander of the Knights of Malta of Maine and New Hampshire, died at his home here to-day. Mr. Conant was sixty-eight years old.

MONEY TRUST INQUIRY VOTED

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The House Rules Committee to-day decided to investigate the money trust of Wall Street as provided for in a resolution by Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota, who wants to determine whether or not there is a great banking combination. The committee heard Mr. Lindbergh to-day and will report on his resolutions at its next meeting. Representative Lindbergh declared that the money trust is strong enough to bring on a panic any time, and that it should be investigated by Congress.

BRAE-BURN GOLFER WINS MAPLEWOOD CUP

MAPLEWOOD, N. H., July 27.—I. W. Small of Brae-Burn was the 18-hole final for the Maplewood cup this morning, defeating H. E. Cushman of Winchester, 2 up 1 to play in an interesting match. Like all his other matches, Small was down from the first hole on being two down at the turn and three down at the tenth. Small took the next two holes in good figures, but lost the next through careless putting and was two down again with 5 holes to play.

Here he started one of those streaks of brilliant playing that won his previous matches, winning the next two holes in 3, and making a wonderful recovery on the next hole, which he won after topping his tee shot, in 4 to 5. As he won the 17th hole the match was over and playing out the last hole Small finished with a 76 with fair approximations.

HOUSE SUSTAINS FOSS "PARTY" VETO

The House of Representatives to-day sustained Governor Foss on his vetoes of the bill to preserve party enrollments under the new Direct Nominations law, and the bill appropriating $114,000 for a new hospital for dipsomaniacs at Foxboro. It also refused to reconsider the vote whereby it sustained the Governor last Friday on his veto of the bill for a new sewerage system at the Wrentham institution. The Governor was much victory easily, participants Lomasney of Boston and Meaney of Rockstone held the Boston and up-State Democrats in line for him.

PREMIER WARNS COMMONS THAT CRISIS IS GRAVE

LONDON, July 27.—Premier Asquith made his promised statement on the Moroccan situation in the House of Commons this afternoon, giving warning that the situation is critical and urging the members of Parliament not to urge further details at the present moment.

"A too close analysis" he said, "might provoke recriminations which it is desirable to avoid. Conversations are proceeding between France and Germany, to which England is not a party, and it is earnestly and sincerely desired that these conversations result in an honorable and satisfactory arrangement to all concerned. The present situation is difficult and may prove harassing unless a solution is found."

"The Moroccan question bristles with difficulties. The government has never claimed a predominant position there, but in the event that attempts at settlement fail, England must become an active party to the discussion of the situation.

"That would be our duty as a power signatory to the Algeciras treaty and would probably be our obligation under the terms of our 1904 agreement with France. AGAIN IT MAY BE OUR DUTY TO DEFEND BRITISH INTERESTS DIRECTLY AFFECTED BY FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS IN MOROCCO."

EYES OF EUROPE FIXED ON LONDON

LONDON, July 27.—The first real move in the threatened war between Germany and England was made to-day, according to a persistent report, when the Atlantic fleet was ordered to Gibraltar preparatory to a hostile demonstration in the waters adjacent to Morocco.

First Lord of the Admiralty McKenna came to London to-day for a conference with Foreign Minister Grey. It is believed that England has decided to settle the Morocco trouble one way or the other immediately, and the naval demonstration, it is believed, will bring the trouble to a climax.

A story printed here to-day says the admiralty has ordered all shore leave stopped and all officers on extended leave of absence recalled. The second division of the home fleet has also been ordered to coal immediately. These orders are supposed to have been issued in expectation of the developments in the Moroccan situation.

Health of King Affected.

The news of the proposed invasion of Moroccan waters by the English navy, and the fact that the health of the King had been seriously affected by his coronation duties and the Franco-German Morocco imbroglio, were almost the sole topic of the question to-day in government circles.

It became known that the King was so weakened on Tuesday that it became necessary to administer oxygen to revive him.

The fact that the King's health is in such a precarious state had not been generally known, and an effort has been made to keep the news from the public at this disquieting time.

The slump in the European stock exchanges to-day, following similar depressions yesterday, and the feverish condition of the market forced conservative and optimistic business men to realize that the situation was much graver than they had been led to believe.

"Would Not Be Tolerated."

The whole trouble was complicated, if not aggravated, by a report that France had manifested a willingness to grant Germany a coast slice of the French Congo in exchange for free rein in Morocco.

The report goes on to say that England told France plainly, but privately, that this action would not be tolerated and that Chancellor Lloyd George proceeded to tell Germany the same thing publicly.

In brief the situation is that England will fight before she will allow the Kaiser to obtain a naval base on the Atlantic coast of Africa within striking reach of England's greatest commercial routes.

The growing strength of the radical elements in England and Germany has something to do with the outbreak of Germany, it is believed, at this time. In Germany the outlook for the election of the so-called aristocracy which rules Germany is very dark just now.

Germany's view of England's attitude is summed up by this blunt statement of the Lokal Anzeiger:

England at the Helm.

"The internal situation in England is so threatening that there is reason to fear the government may resort to that most terrible of weapons—international surprise."

France is watching events in London as closely as the British watch dispatches from Paris say. France replies that England and not France is at the helm of the ship. France says brokers abroad and is wondering whether England can avoid them or wants to avoid them.

The Cologne Gazette points out in an article that is regarded as being inspired that the real object of Germany is to break the Anglo-France comity.

Germany finds the Anglo-France-Russian partnership to be a check upon her freedom of action and is trying to bring about its dissolution. The questions are, Can she effect this without a war, and is she in a position to risk a war? Close observers think not.

The Anglo-France-Russian combination now has a counterpart in the Triple Alliance, as in a general European war Austria and Italy would be too much on the defensive against one another to give decisive aid to Germany.

England, on the other hand, is so anxious to get rid once for all of the German naval

VICE-PRESIDENT HAS REAL DOUBLE

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Vice-President Sherman met Senator Bradley of Kentucky in the lobby of the White House offices.

"Come down to Kentucky with me for a few days, Mr. Vice-President," said Senator Bradley.

"You do it, too boss," said the Vice-President.

"What sort you send is only suggested a friend of mine who observes that a man out in Iowa who looks like you has been acting as your double lately."

"Well," said Mr. Sherman, "I don't know about that Iowa man, but I know that Representative Rothermel of Pennsylvania looks like me. Rothermel you know, has had a lot of trouble since he came to Washington. Everybody has taken him for the Vice-President and the porters and waiters in the hotel have spotted him, so that he has to give 50-cent tips instead of 10 or 15 cents. It doesn't work that way with me, because I look like Rothy and take them out and buy a glass of beer."

C. P. TAFT DENIES 'DICK TO DICK' CHARGE

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27.—Charles P. Taft, President Taft's brother, to-day denied the President from London, stating that he knew nothing about the "Dick to Dick" postscript, and had no interests in Alaska, of any kind.

ENGLAND PLANS A NAVAL DEMONSTRATION ON MOROCCAN COAST

menace that she has taken an attitude which will compel Germany to back down or fight.

At any rate until the German naval power has been annihilated England indeed is seen to have such weighty reasons for war with Germany that the people are beginning to ask somewhat anxiously whether the rapidity with which the crisis is being developed may not reveal a determination upon England's part to strike now while German's power afloat is still larger than that of Great Britain's.

There is a rumor in circulation that a conference of the powers will be called to meet next month to consider the whole Morocco situation. A similar conference some years ago, lead to the signing of the Algeciras convention. The United States was represented at the last convention, but was only there from a commercial viewpoint.

A Berlin dispatch to the London Times says: "There is still hope that a settlement will emerge from the Berlin conversations. The prospect of settlement was much better after the conversations which took place Monday than it was after the preceding meeting between Herr von Kiderlin Waechter and the French ambassador. Perhaps the chief danger now is that under the cover of pledges of secrecy on one hand and anxiety for peace and quiet on the other, Germany may bring matters up to a point at which England and other interested parties would be faced with a settlement which they would be unable to accept."

FRANCE STANDS FIRMLY AGAINST GERMAN DEMAND

PARIS, July 27.—Despite the fact that secrecy is maintained at the foreign office in regard to the negotiations with Germany over the Moroccan affair, it is known here that the situation is very unsatisfactory.

It is understood that Germany is insisting upon her original program of compensations, including the cession of the coast of French Congo. Should France persist in returning a non-assentious, Germany would want the application of the Algeciras act according to Germany's contention, namely, that the situation in Morocco should be to-day what it was in April, 1906, after the signing of the treaty.

France should evacuate the interior of the country. The mandate of the powers authorizing France with Spain to police Morocco expires this year, but this mandate Germany would be willing to renew.

A closer understanding between France and Spain appears a probability, both countries being anxious to avoid difficulties growing out of clashes between the respective authorities in northern Morocco.

The Temps, pointing out that the Germans seem to be astonished at the cleverness and vivacity of French opinion, remarks that as usual the Germans are incapable of understanding that their proceedings are offensive to France and directly harmful to the end they seek.

"Germany thought that the dispatch of a warship to Agadir was all that was necessary to bring about the arrangement they had in mind," says the Temps. "By a singular error of physchology they are confounded in finding that they have spoiled everything."

The Journal des Debats considers the existing tension inevitable, and says that it need cause no surprise. When the opposing points of view have been made to stand out clearly the solution will be easier.

"Germany asks as compensation," says the paper, "territory about equal to the whole of Morocco. If she makes a more reasonable claim France will be ready to listen."

GERMANY MUST NOW MAKE GOOD OR FIGHT BRITAIN

Nothing that Germany has done in many years has so aroused the feelings of England as her attempt to get a slice of the Atlantic coast line in Africa where the Kaiser could establish a military base.

English eyes watch Germany with the sharpness of a hawk. And while Germany may be regarded as slow-going in many ways she has her eyes on the main chance.

But anybody that strikes at the pocket book of England—or her commercial possessions and prospects, which are the same thing—does more than simply twist the tail of the British lion.

Figured down to its lowest terms Germany's action toward France is a blow to England's commerce. England will fight and fight at the drop of the hat when anybody tries to make a move on the European checkerboard that is aimed at her commerce.

Of course, this move coming from Germany, regarded as England's bitterest enemy, received prompt consideration.

Would Embroil Europe.

It may be that back in the brains of many Britishers there is a desire that some day they may have a chance to get after the army and the navy of the Kaiser. But such a fight as that would draw all Europe, practically, into it and England would hesitate as to just what would bring about such a controversy.

The Moroccan situation is admirably suited as a cause for complications that might result in war. There had been a sort of a gentleman's agreement that if anything was to be done about Moroccan affairs between Germany and France that England should be consulted.

But England was left out in the cold. One day she woke up and read in the newspapers that Germany had made a demand on France for about 200,000 square miles of the French Congo, the best harbor on the Atlantic coast.

This demand staggered France. It amazed and angered England. That is what caused Chancellor Lloyd George to sound the warning last week to Germany —a warning which was absolutely plain and was to the effect that Germany would have to back down from this position or England would back up France in a fight on the matter.

A Chance for Peace.

For those Englishmen, then, who wanted a good chance to fight with Germany and who did not care to fight alone, here was the chance—a chance to fight with France and her gallant armies as an ally. Because if England got into a fight with Germany on this question it would follow that France also would have to fight with England.

England will not interfere if Germany should in so modify her requests that they would not include a naval base on the Atlantic coast of Africa. There are two very good reasons why the strategic brain of John Bull does not want Germany with her magnificent navy established on the Atlantic coast of Africa, at Agadir, or any other point.

One of the reasons is that such a base would be a menace to Gibraltar—and England holds that mighty vantage point as the apple of her eye.

The great British ships carry trade Southward within striking distance of the African coast. The ships sail to and from South America, South Africa, India and the Far East. Regarding Germany as a hostile country, it may be easily seen that England would object to her establishing a naval base at Agadir where in time of trouble she could sweep out into the ocean and attack British commerce.

Lloyd George's Warning.

Germany and France may dicker all they want, so far as England is concerned, about boundaries and so forth in Africa so long as an outcome of the controversy is not the establishment of a long slip of coastline as German territory. That seems to be the way that England looks at the matter.

And it was no great wonder then that England was shaken up considerably when Germany made her demands from France. Lloyd George, a radical, but apparently conservatively stating the attitude of England, made this declaration not only to Germany but to the world:

"If a situation were to be enforced upon us in which peace could only be preserved by the surrender of the great and benchmark position that Great Britain has won by centuries of heroism and achievement—by allowing Great Britain to be treated where her interests were visibly affected as if she were of no account in the cabinet of nations—then I say emphatically that peace at that price would be humiliation intolerable for a great country like ours to endure."

Germany Given a Scare.

In other words, if Germany grabbed a fine naval base on the Atlantic coast of Africa without even saying to England, "By your leave," then England would fight.

Lloyd George knows how to use the English language and he used it straight from the shoulder.

Germany, if the newspapers of that country reflect the feeling there, was shocked by the attitude of England. Germany apparently thought that she had a perfect right to give up all claims to Morocco, turning that country over to France if in return she was given something in pay for it—that something being a slice of the coast of the Congo.

Business Germany thought that demand nothing more than right. The Frankfurter Zeitung, speaking for the business and financial interests of Germany, said that Germany would not abandon her rights in Morocco except she got substantial returns elsewhere.

Other German newspapers were not so conservative. They openly declared that the demand of Grmany was just, and that if France did not grant it, that Germany ought to back up her demands by a resort to arms.

When Germany read what Lloyd George had to say some of the newspapers called him a radical agitator. One of the newspapers gave England notice that the world was not intimidated by the swish of the lion's tail as it once was.

It is up to Germany.

And so Europe, and in fact the whole civilized world, waits to see just what Germany will do. It is up to Germany. It is her move.

It will be recalled that at the time of the South African war a cable of sympathy was sent purporting to come from Germany to President Oom Paul, who intervention gave England such a bitter tussle, and when England promptly and in a fighting mood asked Germany about it, Germany said that the cable had not been authorized.

What is Kaiser William going to say to England this time when she tells him that he can't have that coveted naval base at Agadir or further South?

The Kaiser has cut short a yacht cruise to come home to answer this question.

GERMANY UNEASY OVER ENGLAND'S MOROCCAN COURSE

BERLIN, July 27.—No immediate cause of uneasiness regarding the Moroccan affair exists, according to the statements made in diplomatic quarters, but the war scare is widely felt by press and public, which are in the dark as to the status of the Franco-German negotiations, and are affected by foreign pessimism.

The officials of the Foreign Office talk censsuringly, and say that nothing has occurred to justify this pessimism. Great Britain has not interposed in the negotiations, and it is felt as almost sure that Asquith will make no mention to-day of the Cologne Gazette refers cautiously to the possibility of an appeal to arms "which always lurks behind diplomatic complications of this sort. We hope and believe that we are still very far distant from this possibility at present."

MRS. GOELET ON SUBMARINE TRIP

NEWPORT, July 27.—Mrs. Robert Goelet is the third woman in the United States to make a trip in a submarine boat. Miss Alice Roosevelt went down on the Plunger and Mrs. Timmons, wife of Lieutenant John W. Timmons of Washington, took a trip in the Octopus, both going out from Newport.

Mrs. Goelet's trip was also in the Octopus, in command of Ensign A. H. Miles. Mrs. Goelet was accompanied by Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer and Commander George W. Williams of the naval torpedo station here. The Octopus ran aweah about Goat Island and then started up Narragansett Bay, where deep water could be had. Mrs. Goelet was shown the workings of the under-water craft and took a great deal of interest in them.

MRS. GOELET, WHO MADE PLUNGE IN SUBMARINE BOAT

VAIN HUNT FOR MISSING WOMAN

The mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Lillian C. Nickerson, the young wife of Raymond C. Nickerson of Boston and New York, is driving her husband frantic with anxiety and is sadly puzzling their neighbors on Egleston street, Jamaica Plain, and Mrs. Nickerson's fellow employes in the office of the Plant Shoe Company.

Mr. Nickerson has been working in New York for the past six months. Mrs. Nickerson left her home at No. 20 Egleston street last Thursday to go to New York via the Joy line from Providence. She planned to be gone till Saturday, and left a note to that effect for Mrs. Fred C. Wolfe, who lives in the flat underneath.

But she gave the Plant Shoe people no notice of her going. This is most unusual, because she had worked there steadily for five years and had never broken the office rule of applying ahead for leave of absence. The first known of her absence was when she did not appear at work Thursday morning.

Husband Waits in Vain.

Mrs. Nickerson did not join her husband in New York. He went to the hotel and found no trace of her. Her hat and bag were in her stateroom. Her jewelry and about $40 which she had deposited with the purser, were still unclaimed. Nickerson says that the boat officials had no explanation to offer.

It was supposed by neighbors at No. 20 Egleston street that Mrs. Nickerson had made arrangements with her employers to be away from Thursday to Saturday. But the discovery that she gave no notice of her plans comes as a surprise, in view of Mrs. Nickerson's usual attention to the office regulations.

The Nickerson's flat is on the top floor. The house is owned by William Ketter, who lives on the first floor. In the second floor suite live Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Wolfe, daughter and son-in-law of the Ketters. Mrs. Wolfe said today:

"Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson have lived here for three years. They have always been nice, quiet, respectable people. They were happy, with each other and had no quarrels, so far as I know.

"Last December Mr. Nickerson went to New York to take up a place he had secured there. He did not come back here till the Fourth of July, when he came on a flying trip. Mrs. Nickerson stayed here alone, keeping her place at the Plant shoe factory.

"Last Thursday Mrs. Nickerson went to New York to see her husband. I saw her just before she left. She seemed very happy at the prospect of being with her husband again so soon. She said to me: 'I am glad to go to New York and see my husband so soon. I will probably be back Saturday.'

"I went out. When I got back I found she had left a note for me, regilar. Please look after things while I'm gone. Back Saturday.'

"The apartment was left in good order. Mrs. Nickerson took plenty of clothes, however. I don't think for a minute she has committed suicide, unless she went suddenly insane.

"The Nickersons had few visitors, mostly friends of the shoe factory. While they were away, she had hardly any callers. Everyone speaks well of her."

POINTER OF SEVEN HAS 105 PUPPIES

INDIANAPOLIS, July 27.—Ria Hopkins, owned by C. F. Lommel, a young sportsman at Lawrenceburg, Ind., is believed to have the largest dog family in the world. At present she has a litter of fifteen sturdy puppies. There has been no such thing as race suicide with her. She has given birth to 105 puppies during the seven years of her life. Her owner has received $10 each for them.

5,000 AD MEN CAPTURE NAVY

The 5,000 advertising men who are coming to Boston for the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America are certainly "some strong" down in Washington. When they send a note to President Taft or to Secretary of the Navy Von L. Meyer it is promptly O.K.'d just as if it was a paid ad.

If you don't think so, how is that when the ad men send a request to the Capitol for some warships to show their delegates and guests, three of the finest battleships of the United States Navy are put at their disposal.

Secretary Meyer has ordered the battleships Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island detached from the North Atlantic squadron from August 1 to 4 and to report at Boston Harbor to be dressed for inspection by the 5,000 advertising men and women guests.

There will be fully 2,500 Westerners in the advertising men's gathering, and few of them have seen our most modern battleships. The ironclads will be open for inspection during the convention days from 8 a. m. to sunset.

The Charlestown Navy Yard will also be open for the inspection of the ad men and their guests and they will go over the old frigate Constitution, and see the various other new buildings and models in the treasure room of the navy yard.

Convention Opens Tuesday.

The opening session of the convention on Tuesday will be at Faneuil Hall at 10:30 o'clock. President George W. Coleman of the Pilgrim Publicity Association will give the address of welcome. Governor Foss will extend a greeting for the Commonwealth, Acting Mayor Collins for the city and Governor Robert P. Bass for all New England. Responses will be made by President Scott M. Cabot and three other members of the association.

There will be made by a band and lunch on at the Hotel Touraine. The general session of the convention will open at 2 o'clock with addresses by prominent Clubs of Advertising. John Schermerhorn of Detroit will speak on "Newspapers and Their Advertisers." This will be followed by a trip down the harbor on one of the big biker steamers and luncheon will be served on board.

On Wednesday the convention will be divided into sections for the discussion of specialty advertising and will come together again on Thursday for a general session.

H. H. Sawyer, of St. Louis, is Vice-President of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, and is a candidate for the presidency. He is the only candidate for this office who has presented himself thus far. He is president of the Advertising Men's League of St. Louis.

Professor Charles Zueblin will address the open air mass meeting at the Boston Opera House Tuesday, August 3, at 2:30 on "Advertising and Civilization."

Mrs. George R. Gallup is chairman of the women's entertainment committee formed to entertain the wives of "ad" men from other cities. The wives of Boston "ad" men have formed an auxiliary for the occasion, which has elected committees.

The cutting of 5,000 watermelons from Georgia, the bounty here by the Atlanta delegation, will be at the Hotel Victoria instead of at the clambake at the Point of Pines on Thursday as was originally planned. It was feared by the Georgians that the shifting of the cars and delay in getting the melons to the hotels might injure them. So it was arranged to-day to have a special motor car bring the large dining room of the Victoria when the advertising men return from after the auto trip along the North Shore on Wednesday.

Dinner at a Hotel.

The ladies' committee of the convention has arranged for a dinner at a Boston hotel on the evening that the men have their closing banquet in Symphony Hall. When their dinner is over automobiles will be in waiting to take them to Symphony Hall, where they will be reserved seats in the balconies to listen to the speaking.

Congressman Peters has arranged for the advertising men to visit all the Federal forts in harbor during their stay. Special maneuvers will be gone through for the benefit of the visitors.

PINCHOT HITS TAFT MESSAGE

WASHINGTON, July 27.—President Taft's Controller Bay message, evidently denouncing the critics of his action in giving the Controller Bay harbor lands to Bear Dick Ryan's dummy entrymen, brought forth an immediate and tart reply to-day from Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester.

"The President's defence shows how hard it is to make a good excuse for a bad mistake," begins Pinchot. And further on, Mr. Pinchot charges that "the sale and a half of harbor front taken up by Mr. Ryan does effectually control the valuable portion of the channel."

And further: "The public will agree with Colonel Roosevelt that these valuable lands ought to have been kept in the public hands."

Mr. Pinchot declares positively and unqualifiedly that Ryan had the advance information, and that it enabled him to get to the lands ahead of all possible competitors, on the 23d of May, 1907.

"The President does not seem to know any element of secrecy in Mr. Taft does not mention that on the day he signed the order and notified the press that Richard A. Ryan's surveying party was in Alaska, and by November 1 or thereabouts when the order was made they had begun a survey of the land which was to confirm his claim. The omission of the customary thirty days' notice to the public that the lands would be opened gave Ryan what he wanted. It cut off all chance for a competitor to locate on the land between and until after Ryan and made his selection.

"It leaves the rest of the public lands entirely untouched. In spite of all explanations the fact remains that Mr. Taft in opening the lands around Controller Bay without notice to the public, has given the interests behind Ryan an opportunity to acquire the key to the channel of Controller Bay, of which the public knows what was going on.

"The whole controversy over the forest litigation opened the eyes of the public to the extensive and successful efforts which are being made to monopolize the natural resources of Alaska.

5,000 EAGLES UPON PARADE

LAWRENCE, July 27.—Five thousand men appeared in the parade of New England series of the Fraternal Order of Eagles to-day. The parade was an hour passing a given point. The prize of $50 for the aerie showing the largest number of men in line went to New Bedford Aerie No. 647.

The $50 prize for the aerie wearing the best uniforms went to New Haven (Conn.) No. 242. This aerie was headed by a platoon of twenty-eight members of the New Haven police department under Sergeant W. G. Doherty. The prize of $25 for the aerie coming the longest distance is yet to be decided.

The parade started at 11.15 at the corner of Broadway and Essex streets. It passed through the principal streets. At City Hall it was reviewed by Governor Foss, Major Walsh of the executive staff, Mayor John T. Cahill, Senator B. E. Halley and members of the city government.

There were twenty-three aeries in the Lawrence Aerie made a good showing. One of the features of the local turnout was a body of forty Lawrence firemen, all members of Lawrence Aerie, marching under leadership of Chief Engineer John J. Evans.

BRIBE CONFESSION IN LORIMER INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Herbel D. Holtslaw, cashier of the Luka State Bank of Luka, Ill., to-day told the Lorimer investigating committee about the confession of his father, former State Senator D. W. Holtslaw, who acknowledged receiving a bribe of $2,500 for voting for Lorimer. The witness identified a bank deposit slip for $2,500 in the handwriting of his father, dated June 18, 1906. Holtslaw testified that his father had told the family that the confession made by him May 28, 1910, was absolutely true. He said his father had felt it was like duty to make the confession. The witness denied that his father had ever been accused of any wrong doing prior to his confession.

HISGEN TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR

Thomas L. Hisgen, the independent oil man of Stoneham, has decided to seek the Democratic nomination for Governor this Fall, in opposition to Foss.

Mr. Hisgen himself has made no announcement of his candidacy, but the Springfield News announces it to-day. It declares that Mr. Hisgen has decided to apply for nomination papers under the new direct primary law, and to seek the Democratic nomination. Mr. Hisgen supported Foss and Cassidy last year, and but for Bowen would have taken the stump for them.

In 1904 Mr. Hisgen polled 75,490 votes as the Independence League candidate for Governor, while Henry M. Whitney, the Democratic candidate, polled but 70,842 In 1906 Mr. Hisgen was the candidate for President of the United States on the Independence party ticket, and polled a large vote.

LIVELY SKIRMISHES AS RED AND BLUE ARMIES NEAR DECISIVE CLASH

After two preliminary skirmishes between outposts the Red and Blue armies in the Essex County war maneuvres faced each other in battle formation at Morse's Corner, Groveland, this afternoon. A fight for the possession of Groveland Bridge was imminent, as the road leading to the bridge is regarded as the tactical key to the situation.

In the two skirmishes the Blues checked the advance of the Reds temporarily. The Blues lost a few prisoners in one encounter, but accomplished their purpose, that of delaying the hostile forces.

The Red Army started from Middleton early in the day to find the Blues. General Pew of the Reds had received information that General Clark and the main Blue Army had proceeded toward Georgetown. This was taken by General Pew to mean that General Clark was trying to reach the Newburyport turnpike and cut off any possible move by the Reds in that direction. Later developments justified this reasoning of General Pew.

The Red Army was preceded by an advance guard of three battalions of the Eighth Regiment, under Lieutenant-Colonel Frank A. Graves, and three battalions under Colonel Cutting of the Fifth Colonel Cutting took his battalions down Salem street with the intention of locating the provisional cadet regiment under Lieutenant-Colonel Franklin L. Joy.

Volleys Are Exchanged.

Lieutenant-Colonel Graves, meanwhile, led his three battalions of the Eighth along the old Lawrence turnpike. At the junction of Salem and Essex streets, near Pierce pine hill, North Andover, they suddenly ran plump into two troops of dismounted Blue cavalry snugly ensconced behind a stone wall. They had left their horses in the rear and had advanced on foot to check the advance guard of the Reds.

The Blue troopers opened hostilities with a rifle volley. Lieutenant-Colonel Graves immediately threw out one of his three battalions down Essex street and to the right, with orders to deploy and get to the rear of the enemy if possible.

Meanwhile the two remaining battalions of the Reds retained the line of the Blues. The Blue troopers fired a second volley, then suddenly dashed back into the woods, where they effected a junction with the infront a few Blue troopers were captured.

The Blues were likewise successful, in spite of their having to retreat, because they only intended to check the advance of the Reds, which they emphatically did. After accomplishing this a retreat was the only feasible movement for the troopers, being far outnumbered.

Skirmish by Outposts.

At 11 o'clock there was a second skirmish on outposts at Rosford Four Corners. Corporal John H. Perkins of the Blue bike scouts was reconnoitering when he almost pedalled into a troop of Red cavalry. He wheeled about and sped back into the line lines. In Company of the Sixth Regiment formed to meet the Red troop. The cavalry charged gallantly. But the Blue infantry stood stoutly and the cavalry failed to break the Blue line. The skirmish lasted twenty minutes, at the end of which the Red cavalry withdrew.

The advance guard of the Reds reached Georgetown at noon. It kept on toward Morse's Corner Groveland, till within two miles of where the Blues had drawn up in battle array. Picket lines were thrown out on each side.

Two miles from the scene of the impending battle the Merrimac river flowed the old bridge across the river at Groveland, where the Newburyport turnpike swings to the east side of the river, that each force was seeking to control.

General Frederick D. Grant, U. S. A., appeared on the scene this afternoon. With Empire Hanna he inspected the maps of the war territory and prepared to observe the maneuvres.

Had Loaded Cartridges.

A story was told to-day about the capture of a lieutenant of the Blue Army, who was asleep in a hay loft about a mile and a half from Red headquarters on Tuesday night. It was found that the Blue soldier had loaded cartridges in his revolver. This, it was reported, would probably cause the young man trouble and possibly a court martial.

The entry of artillery into the struggle to-day added weight to the manoeuvres. The Second Corps Cadets and Batteries A, B and C of the field artillery have been at the Second Corps camp at Rowley. The Cadets and artillery broke camp at 7:15 to-day to join their respective forces.

Battery B left to join the Reds at Middleton. Batteries A and C and the Cadets started to join the Blue army. It was expected, when camp was broken at 7:15 a. m., that both divisions of this reserve force would connect with their respective main bodies in time to participate in the big battle which was scheduled for noon.

Battery B, assigned to assist the Reds, started out briskly along the road to Middleton. The second Corps Cadets and Battery A and C also left at the same time to join the Blues. They took the old Georgetown road toward Johnson's Pond. It was figured by the officers and men, too, that they might meet the Blue outpost before they got as far as the pond.

An AMERICAN reporter learned to-day that both commanders had been explained upon their own resources for the first time since the war game opened, due to that time the chief umpires had issued orders to the commanders as regards positions. After manoeuvering the two armies into position for battle, he gave the word to-day to the commanders to "go to it."

SENATE PASSES THE WOOL BILL

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The La Follette substitute for the Underwood wool bill, revising the woolen schedule was passed by the Senate this afternoon by a vote of 45 to 32, after a preliminary maneuvers which necessitated five roll calls.

This was forced upon the Senate by reason of the attitude of the Democrats in following out the program which they adopted as their caucus last night, when it was agreed that they should stand solid for the Underwood bill as it passed the House and in the event of the failing to get the necessarily insurgent vote to pass it, they should turn in and support the La Follette substitute.

While the one and only unity in sympathy with it, the Democrats regard it as preferable to the existing schedule.

The action in passing the Lafollette measure will throw the open into conference and permit of an adjustment and change of some sides in it to accord with the necessities of the two branches of both Houses.

Several Rollcalls Necessary.

There is some doubt if that, as the Democrats of the House are disposed to stand by their own measure, to that event no final action can be had on the woolen schedule at this session.

Under the agreement previously reached, voting on the bill and amendments although debate was begun as soon as the morning business was disposed of.

In order to carry out the Democratic measure of submitting to the House the bill, it was necessary for them to vote against the La Follette substitute and all of the amendments.

On this question the regular standpat Republicans voted with the Democratic minority, and only the thirteen Insurgent Republicans and Senator Crawford voted for La Follette's proposition. The roll call was its debate by states was as follows:

The question then came on the original house bill and on the adoption of the Democrats who voted for it could only gain the votes of one Republican, Senator Brown of Nebraska. The Underwood bill was therefore defeated, forty-four to forty-six.

Senator La Follette then moved to reconsider the vote, and this was carried, forty-nine to forty-one, the Insurgents and Democrats voting solidly for reconsideration against the stand pat Republicans.

Pass La Follette Substitute.

Several standpatters, among them Colson and Nelson, voted for reconsideration. This action again left the bill before the Senate and open to further amendments.

Thereupon Senator La Follette again offered his amendment in the nature of a substitute, which only a few minutes before was defeated by a decisive vote of 46 to 14. The amendment was adopted 46 to 32. The Democrats and Insurgents voted together for its adoption and Senator McCumber and Senator Nelson joined with them. Amended, the bill was then passed on roll call by a vote of 48 to 32.

Those voting for the bill were:

"Bacon, Bailey, Bankhead, Bourne, Brist ton, Brown, Bryan, Chamberlain, Chilton, Gronna, Hitchcock, Johnson, Johnston, Kenyon, Kern, Lafollette, Lodge, Lorimer, McCumber and Senator Nelson joined with them. Amended, the bill was then passed on roll call by a vote of 48 to 32.

Those voting for the bill were:

"Bacon, Bailey, Bankhead, Bourne, Bristow, Brown, Bryan, Chamberlain, Chilton, Gronna, Hitchcock, Johnson, Johnston, Kenyon, Kern, Lafollette, Lorimer, McCumber, Martine, Myers, Nelson, Newlands, O'Gorman, Overman, Owens, Paynter, Poindexter, Pomerene, Reed, Shively, Simmons, Smith of Maryland, Smith of South Carolina, Stone, Swanson, Taylor, Thornton, Watson, Williams, Works—48.

Those voting against the bill were:

"Beach, Bradley, Brandegee, Briggs, Burnham, Burton, Clark of Wyoming, Crane, Cullom, Curtis, Dixon, Gamble, Guggenheim, Hemenway, Jones, Lippitt, Lodge, Lorimer, McLean, Nixon, Oliver, Page, Penrose, Perkins, Richardson, Root, Smith of Michigan, Sutherland, Stephenson, Townsend, Warren, Wetmore—32.

"Duties Greatly Excessive."

In supporting his bill Senator La Follette said:

"I offer amendments preparing reductions in the duties on woolen goods. The rates upon which have been recognized as greatly excessive. These reductions, if adopted, will compensate the farmers to the least in part—for the losses which they will suffer as a result of free trade in agricultural products with Canada.

"They will in some measure relieve all of the people of the United States who have been compelled to pay tribute to the Woolen Trust, long the pampered favorite of the ruling party.

"I believe that the duties proposed by me are sufficiently high to enable woolen goods manufacturers to protect American manufactures from European competition. I shall offer no proposal to liberalize the existing duties in the woolen schedule.

"They are nothing—40 per cent; cents on carpet wools, 10 per cent; duty on tops, 15 per cent; cloths in yarn, 50 per cent; rugs and carpets, 40 per cent; shoddy and all other manufactures composed wholly of wool or hair, having wool as the component material of chief value, 60 per cent."

BREAKS AMERICAN RECORD FOR FLIGHT

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., July 27.—S. Cecil Bleriot, of Chicago, flying in one of his American aeroplanes, a Moisant monoplane, established a new endurance record for America on Hempstead Plains, today.

Starting at 5:14 o'clock, Johnstone remained aloft until 9:16, when he was compelled by motor trouble to descend. He had been in the air then four hours and two minutes in sustained flight, thus breaking the old American record of 5 hours, 39 minutes and 49½ seconds, made by Paul D. Peyaske in a Wright machine at San Francisco in January, 1911, by 22 minutes and two seconds.

BEULAH BINFORD'S DIARY A MYSTERY

Notes Kept by Girl Expected to Solve Mystery of Famous Virginia Case.

By DOROTHY DIX

RICHMOND, Va., July 27.—"Find the woman" was the old adage when a crime has been committed. Acting upon that time-honored theory, and there is always a woman at the bottom of every crime, the police of Richmond are sending a pretty young girl named Emily Binford as a possible clew to solve the mystery of Beulah D. Who is accused of having done away with her husband, Henry C. Beattie, some time in the morning of July 18, and have committed such a terrible and inhuman deed.

For many years there was no more united pair than they were mere children. Henry C. Beattie and Beulah Binford had been sweethearts. Beattie determined to marry and nothing should, as the French say, be allowed to come between Beattie and Beulah.

She went away, and time did not meet until last Spring, when fate united them accidentally together at the Norfolk races.

The old love flamed into new fire, and their old relationship was renewed. The girl followed Beattie back to Richmond, and for a short while lived with her, but as usual, the course of true love did not run smoothly, and the difficulties that are believed to have existed between Beattie and his wife arose, so that he might be free to go to the girl who has always seemed to have for him an irresistible attraction.

Beulah Binford, on the right, is the girl whose friendship for Henry C. Beattie, Jr., has led to her being detained in the case in which he is charged with slaying his wife. Photographs of Beattie and his wife are also shown.

In Childish Writing.

The diary begins in May, soon after negroes in Richmond and it ends significantly enough on July 18, the night of the murder.

It is written in a half-formed, childish, calligraphy, typical of the girl's unformed character, and in one of the little daintily perfumed memorandum books given about with a certain brand of whiskey. On the fly leaf is this inscription:

"I am going to write a little love note every day in this little book for my darling Henry."

The first note May 18. "My darling Henry: Just a line to let you know that I still love you with all my heart."

May 19.—"My darling baby. Please be a good boy and don't flirt with any other girls. Your own baby, Beulah."

Beginning in June the tone of the notes became more endearing. For instance, on June 3, she wrote:

"My darling came to see me at 9:30 to night and stayed until 11. He was awfully sweet to me."

Henry Beattie went to Norfolk on June 20 and wrote Beulah that night. Her diary of June 21 says:

"I got a dear sweet note from my baby in Norfolk today. Henry, please don't stay all night in Norfolk."

Planned for a Flat.

Then this:

"My baby is coming back today and I must be around the house to see him."

Frequent references were made to visits to the theatre during the latter part of June, at which time she seemed to be ill. On three successive days her diary stated that she had been ill the night before and unable to close her eyes before daylight.

June 25—"I am going to get a flat for myself and Henry can come and see me as often as he likes and nobody will have anything to do with it."

Second entry in book.

"My darling baby, Henry. I went out with F. to-night, but I won't do it any more, for Henry does not like him. I don't care anything for him. He is so mean.

About the same time:

"My darling Henry, I wish you would see H. and talk with him, as you have more influence and he will pay more attention to what you say. M. L. is going to move and I don't think they will let me go with them.

June 28.—"My Henry called me up today and we had a long talk and it made me feel so much better."

June 30.—"My Henry came over to-night and took me for a ride. Came home and went to bed."

July 1.—"Went to the ball game, then down Broad street and came back and went to bed at 11 o'clock."

Note Of Infatuation.

July 9.—"My darling Henry boy came up to-night and we went down to May's and stayed there till nearly midnight. Then came back again and dreamed about the fine time I had with Henry at May's."

In the book is an itemized statement of what she needed for her room, the total cost of furnishing which was to be $56, for which she was to pay $5 down and $1 a week, for she and Henry Beattie had planned to fit up a flat, where they were to live together. Through it all ran the one note her infatuation for Beattie and her determination to indulge her love at any cost to herself and others. And it showed more—it showed Beattie agreeing in all of her plans in spite of the good, pure wife at home and the baby in the cradle.

It seems absurd to speak of Beulah Binford as "the other woman" in this case, for one is still merely a child. She was only seventeen on last Monday, although she has already run the gamut and is old as a certain kind of life before she is in years. There are women born to make history and to be a curse to man. She is one of them. When she was still a little girl in short frocks and pig tails she had set the school by the ears, and people had begun to talk about her. A month after when she was thirteen, the affair between her and Henry Beattie began.

When she was barely fifteen her baby was born in Raleigh, N. C. Since then the girl has led a wild life, following the fancy of the moment with irresponsible light heartedness. She has wandered over the country with this companion and that, for she has been no more faithful to Beattie than he has been to her. They have not had even the dignity of a great love to sanctify their flouting of the conventions of society, but somewhere, somehow, they too seem to have always held some over powering fascination for each other that in the end called them back to each other.

Possibly, when Beattie broke with Beulah Binford when he married, he intended to be faithful to his wife, but when he met her again the old flame was fanned to life and he took up once more the broken thread of the romance of his early youth. He was pleading to fly on a little flat for her, a poor enough place where everything was to be of the cheapest, and quarters in order to enjoy this abode in fact, with no wifely reproaches in his ears, no wife's tears to be met, no wife's eyes upon him, he was unspeakably cold and cowardly enough to kill that wife, to free the law to determine.

Shrewd detectives who have traced down every clue of the case believe he did was and that he killed his wife for no other reason than that she stood between him and the girl with whom he was infatuated.

As for Beulah Binford herself, she is as pretty as a picture, and frankly on usual. She is very blonde, very fair, with big blue eyes under delicately penciled eyebrows, a wide sensible mouth, flashing white teeth and a little pointed chin.

Shows No Regrets.

But she looks more than her seventeen years. Her eyes have in them the old look of the eyes that have seen too much. Her over-ripe figure is that of a mature woman. Her manners are self-possessed and she seems to be highly enjoying being one of the central figures in a tragedy that has shaken this staid, aristocratic, ultra-conventional, old Southern city to its foundations. If she has any regrets for herself, for the life she has wasted, for the little nameless child she brought into the world and then abandoned and let die in strange woman's keeping, she does not show it.

MISS CUNARD NOW A BRIDE

LONDON, July 27.—Miss Margery Cunard, member of the famous family which founded the steamship line which bears their name, and regarded as "the perfect type of British beauty," was married yesterday to Robert Vernon Harcourt, a member of Parliament, a grandson of John Lothrop Motley, the famous American historian and diplomat. He is a son of the late Sir William Vernon Harcourt and a brother of the present Colonial Secretary.

Romance-loving Britishers rejoiced in the marriage, for it was a far more tender affair than usual. In 1909 the beautiful Miss Cunard and the young statesman became engaged, and all their friends were happy. It seemed an ideal match. The young woman was a wonderful type of loveliness. The man, besides having proved his worth in public life, had written several fairly successful plays and books.

Engagement Broken.

But for some reason that never has been satisfactorily explained the engagement was broken off last year. It was said that while each liked the other their feelings were not strong enough to fit them to bind their lives up into a mutual life. Both secured very unhappy, and so did their friends. They went their separate ways and met only casually.

It became a problem—owing to the popularity of each—for London hosts and hostesses to arrange matters so that they would not meet at dinners and other functions. Occasionally they were invited to the same affairs and great embarrassment prevailed, which was only relieved by Mr. Harcourt pleading sudden business calls or something of that sort, and retiring.

Reconciliation at last.

"If they could only be brought together in some fashion!" prayed every society man and woman in New England.

Their wish was—in some fashion. But no one knows to this day whether it was through the quiet intervention of some confidential friend, through a chance meeting at some town house or country place, or through correspondence, one or the other having finally pleaded guilty to some silent fault.

But all events, they went to the altar recently and all their friends were in high spirits, but no one knew just how the reconciliation came about. And the young persons wouldn't tell.

Who Ever Heard Of Such a Clothing Sale Before?

As the news of it spreads, the crowds get bigger and bigger. Our policy of a complete clearance each season is a new idea to Boston. Only such a policy could result in such remarkable reductions. Word-of-mouth advertising is cutting a big figure in this sale, for any printed statement of the true facts must seem almost beyond belief to the average man. Come, get your share of these genuine bargains. We doubt if such good clothes were ever sold for so near nothing before.

Receiver's Sale

The important reason for doing so is that the receiver must have money to pay the creditors. Today and Friday, and every day until this stock is disposed of, will be a big day. Our misfortune is your gain. To argue with you further in this battle for money is unnecessary.

SURVEYING NEW SUBWAY ROUTES

The preliminary work of surveying the routes of the new Boylston street subway and the Dorchester tunnel has been begun in accordance with the orders of the Boston Transit Commission to Chief Engineer Davis to make the necessary investigations and plans and specifications.

A squad of five young men armed with the necessary surveying paraphernalia have started in each of the two heads of Boylston street and Commonwealth avenue to lay out the course of the subway, which will run from this point to the Boylston street subway station, and as long as they are in comparatively clear territory their work will go on during the day. When, however, they get down into the heart of the town the traffic during the day will prevent their work, and they will labor at night.

Another squad of about the same size starts operations in the surveying line tonight along Winter and Summer streets, which will run down Winter and Summer streets from the Park street station to Dorchester. Their work will be confined entirely to the night until the business districts where traffic is not too heavy to interfere with their work.

The men at work will make all necessary borings, excavations and do all acts necessary to survey the ground thoroughly. Just how long this would take is not known. Work on the East Boston tunnel extension will begin soon.

BALL PLAYERS HEAR BAND.

Members of the Red Sox and White Sox league clubs today that treasure, the band leader, has more musical curves than they thought could be packed in one man's head. The ball players were guests of Creatore at the band concert at the American League grounds last night. With the rest of the big audience they enjoyed the concert immensely. A new program will be offered tonight.

COMMERCE MEN 'DOING' MUNICH

MUNICH, July 27.—Late tonight the members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce will leave here for the delights of Vienna. All of them will leave the city with regrets that their stay could not be longer, for not only have they been hospitably entertained but there is much to see and enjoy.

Every member of the party has had his or her time fully occupied since arrival here Tuesday evening. Early yesterday they started on an automobile tour of the municipality and its suburbs. The layout of the city and its new additions, the parks and the methods of housing reform were studied by those particularly interested in city planning.

One of the principal attractions was the Bavarian museum, which, with its library, is the largest institutions of the kind in existence. It illustrates the historical progress of civilization and the arts, and the development of all nations is shown from original models and exact counts in the forms of pictures.

Time permitted, study was made of the vocational and continuation schools, the permanent exposition buildings, the great locomotive works, the picture galleries and the Ruhmeshalle or Hall of Fame.

Fred J. Melsaac, special correspondent of the Boston AMERICAN, is writing vivid articles about what the Chamber of Commerce party is seeing abroad. Read his article in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

137 ON CYMRIC ARE DETAINED

One hundred and thirty seven immigrants from Russia, Austria, Turkey and Syria were picked up Boston on the White Star liner Cymric today were taken to Gallops Island to the health officials and most rigidly examined for traces of Asiatic cholera. Food which the immigrants carried consisting of hard bread, dry fish, cheese and sausage was burned on the island.

The precautions of the health officials today were unusual in every respect. They would not even allow the customs officers or the newspapermen aboard until after the whole list of passengers consisting of eight seven women and 852 steerage were examined.

Dr. Currie was detained in quarantine in Port Phoenix. William Madison Gordon, a passenger who arrived on the steamer of Deer Island Light and he was examined by Assistant Post Physician Dr. Francis X. Crawford. Dr. Gay, acting under orders of the Board of Health, then proceeded to make the examination of the steerage for traces of infectious diseases and particularly cholera.

After the first examination the 137 immigrants from Russia, Austria, Turkey and Syria were taken to Gallops Island in three tugs under the charge of Inspector Vigilant.

TAFT PLANS TRIP OF MONTH AND HALF

WASHINGTON, July 27.—It is likely that President Taft will make a record-breaking trip this Fall, lasting a month and a half. The President will start from Hot Springs about the middle of September. As has planned, the trip be confined only the Middle Western States. Now it has lengthened by a month and 500 miles and more will be added to satisfy the desire to see and hear the President expressed by the Rocky Mountain and Pacific States.

FINAL Clean-up 31 DAYS MORE At This Address

Must Vacate Sept. 1

WE shall not move a single garment from this location; and we are compelled to vacate it on September 1st. This means that in 31 short summer days, everything now in the store must be sold. We realize the gigantic task on our hands—and we have accordingly cut the prices down to a point never before touched on high-grade clothes in Boston. And Bostonians are appreciating the opportunity—every day is a record-breaker.

We Are Not Going to Leave BOSTON

We have not yet announced a new location because landlords have been boosting rents above the point where we could continue giving the values for which we are famous. But they are coming our way now—and we expect to be able to announce a new location shortly. WE ARE NOT GOING TO LEAVE BOSTON—even if we have to take TEMPORARY quarters.

All $10 and $12 Suits... $5

All $15 and $16.50 Suits $7.50

All $18 and $20 Suits.. $9.50

All $25 and $26.50 Suits $12.50

All $28 and $30 Suits.. $14.50

All $35 and $40 Suits.. $16.50

Everything in the store goes at the extraordinary sacrifices. This MUST be an absolute clearance. Sack Suits, Coats and Trousers, Walking, Prince Albert, Dress and Tuxedo Suits, Overcoats, Raincoats, etc.—not only in Summer weights, but are included in this Final Clean-up at about one-third of their actual value. It will pay you handsomely to buy now for next season.

All Winter Weight and Fur-Lined Overcoats

By R. W. LARDNER.

It's time for some more accidents to befall the Red Sox, for most of the cripples are getting into shape and the white squad with its exceptional pitching staff, will be in before the end of the week unless something new and awful happens.

Eddie Cicotte, whose skin bone was splintered by a batted ball in Cleveland last week, is able to put on a uniform again, and will pitch one of the games against St. Louis if he is asked to do so.

Killilay got a crack on the shin in batting practice day before yesterday and it is paining him a lot, but he won't be disabled much longer. Duffy Lewis's big toe is busted. He can get around a little and will put on a uniform today. It splint can be fixed up that will allow regular baseball shoes to go over.

Bradley in Bad Shape.

Bradley seems to be out for the whole season, and perhaps for many seasons. The club's doctor says he would have been in fairly good shape by now if he hadn't tried to do things with his bum leg before it was ready to stand the strain. As it is, Bradley will have to wear a cast on his knee all Summer, and nobody can play ball handicapped like that.

With the future of Hugh Bradley so uncertain, the value of Clyde Engle is increased. Nobody ever doubted that Clyde did have value. John I. Taylor knows it, and the boss don't like to think what would have happened to the Red Sox this season without Clyde.

To start with, he played a very classy game at third and hit around the .300 mark. Then he filled in at left field and went right on hitting. Now he has assumed the daily first baseman and really acts as if he never had tackled any other position. Engle is the ideal utility man, because he is willing. He's been asked to do so much that no one would wonder if he ever "balled up" in his work, but he takes all transfers without a murmur and goes to wherever they send him.

Hedges Could Use Engle.

Mr. Hedges of the Browns doubtless could use Clyde as a regular. He would like to land him, but his departure would leave a big hole in the box, and it is doubtful whether the Browns have anything of equal value to give.

To-day's games will wind up the series with the White Sox. St. Louis comes next and there is a postponement to be played off with the Browns, making five bouts to all. During this engagement Meyers, Taylor and Donovan will be able to look over the St. Louis crowd carefully and decide whether or not there is anything in it worth trading for.

Roy Corhan, the youngster who was saying such brilliant ball for the White Sox until Russell Ford "beaned" him, is here with Duffy's team and works out daily at shortstop. He still suffers from the injury to his head and is unable to get back his regular job. Meanwhile Manager Duffy is very thankful that no one took Lee Tannehill away from him for is one swell infielder and can do the shortstopping just as well as anybody in the league.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

Hugh Duffy was in uniform for the first time in many days. He took a vacation from scouting.

Jess Baker, one of Chicago's left handers, pitched remarkable ball for four innings. Then he seemed suddenly to lose most of his effectiveness.

Pat Dougherty and Rollie Zeider appeared as pinch batters, but neither of them was able to deliver.

The shinguards with which the Red Sox pitchers will be armed, or legged, will be the invisible kind invented by Al Shaw, former big league catcher.

Heinie Wagner took some of his speed on the way, or it would have been a cinch for him to make the throw to Engle wallop to the fence in the fifth. It took a perfect relay by Tanguay to nail Heinie.

The crowd got after Harry Lord, but he just smiled and promised to come back and make the bugs forget it in today's game.

The most sparkling play of the day was Callahan's catch of Lavender's terrific drive in the seventh. "Cal" went way back to the fence and pulled in the drive with his gloved hand.

Harry Lord may have had a bad day, but his old side-kick, Andy McConnell, didn't. "Mac" collected two singles and a double and fielded brilliantly.

BRIDES IS TO COACH AT YALE

Dr. Arthur E. Brides, the well known football star, graduated from Yale in 1910, will assist Coaches Walter Camp and Field in coaching the Yale varsity football team the coming Fall. While at the New Haven college Brides was considered one of the best football players in college circles. He played at left halfback and left guard.

Dr. Brides and his wife have taken up a residence in New Haven, where the old Eli gladiator will assist Dr. Flint, who is surgeon-in-chief at the New Haven Hospital.

While at Yale Dr. Brides felt to counting his biggest wife. One days it was announced that the Yale star had taken to himself a wife. This was after he had played on the 1908 and 1909 football teams. In 1910 Dr. Brides was below in his studies and was forced to forsake the college campus for nine and for all.

Dr. Brides is a thorough student of "bloodless football," and is certain to be of great aid to the other coaches in turning out as eleven at the New Haven college that will be able to successfully give battle to Harvard, Princeton and the other colleges on Old Eli's schedule.

BIG RACING EVENTS IN NEW YORK ARE OFF

NEW YORK, July 27.—The calling off of this year's $25,000 guturity, long a classic feature of the American turf, was declared by turfmen to-day to be the first direct result of the failure of the Gittens bill. Announcement is also made that the Saratoga hunt meeting has been called off.

RADCLIFFE, FAMOUS BALL PLAYER, DEAD

OCEAN CITY, N. J., July 27.—John Y. Radcliffe of Camden, N. J., a poultry merchant in the Reading terminal, died suddenly at the social club here of heart disease. Radcliffe, who was sixty-three years old, was one of the star players of the Athletic ball team years ago.

MACK DENIES STORY OF CICOTTE TRADE

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—Cornelius McGillicuddy, director of destinies of the Athletics, states emphatically that he had no knowledge of the rumored trading of Cicotte of the Red Sox for two Mackmen players, presumably the heavers, Krause and Martin.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Just one more chance the Rustlers have in getting a game in the present series from the Chicago Cubs, the one scheduled for this afternoon, as to-night the Boston lads pack up and move into Pittsburg.

The Rustlers were subjected to two defeats at the hands of Chicago's champions Wednesday. The scores were 4 to 1 and 7 to 2, respectively. There were stretches in each game when the visitors made the Cubs extend themselves to their limit. There were other stretches which were wholly comic.

Patsy Flaherty, in an effort to catch a long, high drive by Tinker in the seventh, got his legs crossed three or four times while running back for the ball, and finally, toppled in a heap just as the ball came down. It struck something solid and rebounded more than half way to the infield. Patsy picked himself up and gazed wildly in every direction except behind him, looking for the ball, while Sprait and Jones retrieved it.

Bill Jones made a great hit with the assemblage. His legs are so short that it seemed as if he were running a long time in one place. Jones pulled the funniest act of the day in the second game and strengthened the belief that he has failed to understand the full significance of one of Manager Tenney's orders.

The first principle taught a new outfielder always is to throw the ball home where as soon as he can after it comes to him.

Jones seems to believe that somewhere and anywhere are synonymous. Anywhere was where he threw the ball, after failing to connect with Schulte's Texas leaguer in the eighth inning of the second game. The bases were full and nobody out at that time.

As it looked like a sure out, the Cubs all held their bases, and when Jones picked up the ball he had tons of time to force a man out by throwing to third or second base. Instead, he threw to the pitcher in the middle of the diamond.

ENGLISH ENTERTAIN ATTLEBORO ATHLETE

NORTH ATTLEBORO, July 27.—Alpin Chisholm, father of George A. Chisholm, the Yale athlete who won honors in the recent international games in London, has received a letter from his son.

He writes that the Americans have been given a great time. They were guests of Sir Lee Knowles at lunch and for an automobile ride and they took tea at the House of Parliament. He secured about the pluces of interest by Mr. Burns, the English labor leader, met Lord Charles Beresford and Lord Claude Clarendon and visited Oxford university.

The American athletes expect to arrive in Boston about August 16.

ALL CRACK ATHLETES AT CHICAGO GAMES

CHICAGO, July 27.—With 140 entries received so far the Illinois State Gaelic Athletic Association expects to make its third annual open athletic meet the greatest the West has ever seen.

Headed in the list of entries are such famous stars as Melvin Sheppard, who has proved to be the peer of the middle distance runners of the world, and Con Walsh, the pride of the New York Athletic Club, who has achieved so much skill in the weight events in Canada and the United States. The Irish-American Club of New York will furnish another star of the meet in Dan O'Herin, the hero of the Olympics in London in 1908.

THOMPSON FAVORITE OVER WILLIE LEWIS

NEW YORK, July 27.—Cyclone Johnny Thompson, the western middleweight, who has taken part in more than 200 fistic battles, and who is a claimant for the title annexed by Billy Papke, is the favorite over Willie Lewis, whom he meets in a ten-round bout at the National Shooting Club to-night.

HARRINGTON LET GO BY PIRATES

PITTSBURG, July 27.—Pitcher Frank Harrington, member of a baseball family in Wakefield, whose work for the Boston College team attracted Pittsburg scouts six weeks ago, has been disposed of to the Milwaukee club in the American Association. He also did good work last season for the St. John, N. B., club.

The terms of the deal are not public, but as the pirates never do never given a moment's trial with Pittsburg it is not expected that he will get away without a string attached.

Pittsburg may buy him back in the Fall. It had been supposed here that Harrington was to be one of the players awarded to St. Paul in connection with the O'Toole deal.

Owner Lennon is to have one or more men when the $22,500 uncertainty is delivered on September 1.

WELSH AND HOGAN MAY MEET ON LABOR DAY

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—Arrangements are well under way for a twenty-round bout between Freddie Welsh and One-Round Hogan on Labor Day. Jim Coffroth, who is promoting the affair, already has made satisfactory arrangements with Hogan. Welch, who is in Southern California, is said to think well of the match, providing Hogan will agree to make the 133-pound limit a couple of hours before the fight. Hogan has been offered a return match with "Knockout" Brown next Fall. He will probably accept the offer.

HILTON'S 1/2 PRICE SALE

OUR clearance sales always meet with eager sympathy because our customers know, and the general public is fast learning to know, that our reductions are bona-fide.

Our present clearance sale involves more Suits and finer ones than at any previous time—yet it will be much shorter in duration than ever, for it is compassing a volume of business far greater than any we have yet held. This doesn't just "happen" so, but is the natural result of "golden rule" merchandising.

Every suit in the house is embraced in this sweeping clearance movement at half-price. Whether you're a young man, or a middle-aged man, a fat, tall, short, slim or regular man, you'll find your size and perhaps the very style, color, pattern and fabric you want, for there are thousands of suits embraced in this sale.

The rules of this sale are: No refunds, no C. O. D. orders and all alterations at cost. Owing to the immense reductions, no exceptions to these rules can be made.

LANGFORD GOING TO AUSTRALIA IN FALL

By RILEY.

Sam Langford, the dusky Canadian heavyweight, will sail for Australia with his manager, Joe Woodman, Porky Flynn and some fast lightweight the middle of September. While in the Antipodes Sam will meet Bill Lang, Jack Lester and Sam McVey.

Porky Flynn is billed to engage in battles with Bill Squires, Lester and a boxer named Phelps.

Just now Langford is training on his farm in New Scotia in preparation for making a grand tour of Canada at the head of an athletic combination which will include Porky Flynn, physical director McLean and possibly Bob Day, heavyweight champion of Canada.

Hugh McIntosh wanted Wodman to take the Boston Tar Baby to Australia next month. Joe, however, could not see his way clear to do this on account of the present Canadian tour and because Sam is billed to go for several minor bouts here in the East.

The lightweight who will accompany the party has not been decided upon. There is a very strong likelihood, however, that he will be some well-known Boston boy.

By Fall one of the greatest array of heavyweights ever brought together will be in Australia. And they will all be under contract with Hugh McIntosh.

Jack Will be There Too.

Jack Johnson will soon finish his engagements in England, and after touring the Continent he will go to Australia where he is billed to fight McVey and Lang. McVey will sail for Australia from England, Langford and will probably be matched to meet some of Australia's "hopes" the latter part of September or early in October.

Al Kaufman is booked to sail from Vancouver August 10. He will arrive in the land of the Kangaroo before the first of September and will start training at once.

McIntosh's present plans call for a series of elimination bouts. The two men who survive them will be matched for the heavyweight championship of the world. And just now it looks as though Langford and Langford would defeat all comers.

This is the night that "Cyclone Johnny" Thompson shows his fistic wares to New York sports. Johnny is down on the card to meet Willie Lewis at the National sporting club. Thompson should win a popular decision, provided that Willie doesn't "come back" and show some of that fighting spirit which won him fame in years gone by.

Sandy Ferguson—he all know him—will exchange wallops with Tony Ross in a ten-round bout before the Twentieth Century Club in New York, Friday night. If Sandy and followed the straight and narrow path he would now be fighting it out with the top notchers in the sport of the late Marquis of Queensbury. The Chelsea "bad boy" is now reported in being in good condition. If such is the case he should make Ross go the limit to win. The winner will be matched to meet Joe Jeanette next Tuesday.

Young Donohue of Roxbury has started training for bouts this Fall and Winter. He would like to meet Packey McFarland or Matt Wells, and "Sport" Flaherty is willing to post $1,000 to bind the match. Donohue would also like to go into a ring with Eddie Murphy, the sensational little lightweight from South Boston.

Welcome to our fair city John J. Gleason, noted fight promoter, athletic director and baseball magnate. Your coming was a decidedly welcome news to Boston's baseball "fans." With a man of Gleason's experience in sporting affairs teaming up with William Hepburn Russell and Fred Murphy, the Rustlers should be heard from before many moons. The National League Club has now got what it needed most, and that is a man familiar with sporting matters. With Gleason, Russell and Murphy working in harmony, Boston should once again be put on the baseball map in the Old League. As a fight promoter Gleason is without a peer, and has the happy faculty of getting whatever he goes after. And here's hoping that he has even greater success in landing star ball tossers for the Rustlers.

MOTOR BOAT BREAKS RECORD AND THEN SINKS WITH CREW

PEORIA, Ill., July 27.—The Dishurber III., owned by James A. Pugh of Chicago, and winner of the Western championship at Dubuque, Ia., only three weeks ago, led the free-for-all forty-foot class here, covering the five miles in the remarkable time of 7.38 minutes, or at the record-making pace of 37.08 miles per hour.

Pugh and his crew were wildly cheered as his boat crossed the line, but the record was startled the next minute to see that the launch began to sink with her crew on board.

The $10,000 Planing hydroplane sank in thirty feet of water. Pugh was the last man to step from her bows into a launch as she sank.

Only a buoy on the river marks the position of the boat which traveled the fastest five miles ever seen in aquatics in the United States.

DOOIN BREAKS LEG IN GAME

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—Manager Charles Dooin, whose work behind the bat has done much to keep the Philadelphia team in the race for the pennant, collided with Oakes of the Cardinal team in a play at the plate in the fourth inning yesterday and suffered a broken leg.

The fracture is just above the ankle, and physicians say he will be out of the game the rest of the season.

John Titus suffered a broken leg in a game with the Cardinals some time ago, and Sherwood Magee was suspended for an attack on Umpire Finneran in a game with the same club.

Mickey Doolin, shortstop, will be chosen acting manager. It was due to Doolin's work both on the field and as manager, and the pitching of Alexander that the Phillies had come up this season from the also ran class to strong contenders for the pennant.

Doolin must remain in the hospital until Saturday night at least, when he hopes to be taken to Philadelphia. In the present state of the manager's deserted team mates, an X-ray photograph was taken of the fracture, which is of the right fibula and about four inches above the ankle. The bone is broken in two.

THOMPSON WILL MAKE 158 LBS.

By TAD.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Cyclone Johnny Thompson, the sycamore toil tiller, joined on Tuesday night. New York looked much bigger than Sycamore to Jawn—in fact it looked considerably larger.

He was particularly impressed with the progress Mr. Rathskeller had made in his business.

"Why, when I was here before," piped Johnny, "he only had a few stores. Now, go with, every block or so you walk you see Rathskeller. Whoever that guy is, he certainly has built up his trade.

Will Make 158 Pounds.

"Oh, about the middleweight clip. I'd give anything to have Papke box me again. When I won over him in Australia I only weighed 152 pounds and he must have weighed 170 at least. He can't do 158, so he's trying to make the public believe that there is an international weight which is 160 pounds. That's all the bunk. There is one weight, the same weight Ketchel and the other champions fought at, and that is 158 pounds. Papke knows that and is trying to bull his way from a heavyweight to a middleweight.

"I'll fight Papke and let him weigh a ton. I'll go into the ring and do 158 pounds to show the public that I am the best middleweight in the world, and Papke doesn't have to step on the scale at all. I don't really think there are five good men who can do 158 pounds now. These fellows who claim to be middleweights are light heavyweight. They'll have Jim Flynn, Kaufman, Morris, Langford and Johnson in the middleweight class pretty soon if they keep this thing up."

Ad and Welsh Pose.

The Western sporting fraternity are all smoked up over that Wolgast-Welsh fight. Both Freddie and Ad made their early reps in Los Angeles, and this same pair are kings in the eyes of the fans out that way. Welsh has considerably since he looked out there before and now the Southern fans can't make up their minds which man to bet on in the coming affair. Wolgast and Welsh posed together for a photo out there last week and Freddie looked to be a head taller than the champion.

Jim Coffroth hasn't landed an August card yet, so far as we have heard. He wanted Papke and Klaus, but couldn't land them. He tried for the Flynn-Morris "go," but blew that also. Then he tried Wolgast and Brown, but the Brown end wanted too much of the filthy lucre, and that ended negotiations. Looks as though the disappointed pleasure seeker will have to go back to Sam Fruitt and Gus Coster, the Tybee bears.

BOSTON SCULLS AT SARATOGA

SARATOGA, N. Y., July 27.—Records are expected to go by the board in the annual rowing championship to be held on Saratoga Lake tomorrow and Saturday. The entry list is one of the highest class that has been offered for the championship in years. In the senior quarter mile dash Canada is strongly represented and this event may go to the Maple Leaf.

All the entrants for the intermediate scull event save one are New Englanders, hailing from Cambridge, Springfield, Boston and Lynn, Mass. Drew of Philadelphia is the only entrant not from New England. Gordon of Philadelphia is the favorite in the championship singles, the classic sculling event of the regatta, although he has a strong field made up of O'Neill of Halifax, Scholes of Toronto and Shepherd of New York opposing him. New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and five other towns of lesser importance have entries in the single dash or sculls.

One of the closest contests will likely be the race of intermediate four-oared shells with teams from Detroit, Duluth and Ballymore entered. The classy crews will compete in the event of the senior four-oared shells. They are from the N. A. A. A. Arundel of Baltimore, Mound City of St. Louis, Britannia of Ottawa and Argonaut of Toronto. New York is touted to annex the senior quadruple scull event.

Special articles will begin reaching Saratoga Lake this afternoon, and the biggest crowds in years are expected to be on hand during the two days of racing.

RED SOX WINNERS.

TY COBB AFTER A NEW RECORD

Ty Cobb, the wonderful outfielder of the Detroit Tigers, hopes to establish a new batting record. So far this season he has batted up far better than during previous seasons.

Inasmuch as it is generally admitted that Cobb is at his best from the middle of July on, it is well within the range of possibilities that he may set a new batting average which will exceed Duffy's high record mark made when he was with Boston in 1894 of .438.

These are the 400 batters of the game to date, in 100 or more games:

Cobb, Detroit, 1907, 129 games, average .422
Keeler, Baltimore, 1897, 128 games, average .422
Lajoie, Cleveland, 1901, 141 games, average .422
Anson, Chicago, 1887, 121 games, average .421
Hackett, Cleveland, 1895, 112 games, average .421
Burkett, Cleveland, 1896, 133 games, average .410
Delehanty, Philadelphia, 1899, 143 games, average .408

M'GRAW SORE ON UMP. JOHNSTONE

CINCINNATI, July 27.—John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, has repeatedly threatened to go on the players' delegation, but was so far threatens to bring charges of incompetence against Umpire Johnstone. It will bring the matter before President Lynch shortly. McGraw says:

"I am tired of having the Giants being held up before the public as such quitters as has been done against the New York club by Johnstone. I have the evidence I require to prove his habits and shall write Lynch to that effect. I am determined to make an issue of this right now. Johnstone is not a fit man to be on the staff."

McGraw wound up his tirade by saying, "When Becker was on trial in the shafting in Tuesday's game, Johnstone said to him 'Become' I am getting even with lots of you fellows, and I will get even with you, too."

Yesterday's game was stopped in seventh inning and given to the Wasps. Although the exact score will never be known, as for the game being stopped. Micky, the mysterious strange kid from the West, is the girl who is responsible for the game being stopped. He just happened along on his way to his music teacher and find out what the score was. The gate keeper, who recognized him in an instant, offered to let him into the grounds free.

Now from the advertising that Micky has received, he is supposed to be a famous character. The fact that no one knows where he lives and what his other name is adds to his popularity, so when he was caught sight of him, there was a wild rush in his direction. No one knows why, but there was.

When he started down the street the mob of kids following him resembled the wake of a minstrel band. It would not have been so bad if this idle curiosity had been confined to the rans alone, but it was not. The third baseman of the Wasps, who claimed he did not get a good look at Micky the other day, left his post and joined in the procession. Then, good night! Even "Puggy" Mullins and "Skinny" Shaner, to say nothing of Socks, the aspire, were overcome and there was nothing else to do but stop the game and follow Micky.

Several kids hung around the house into which Micky disappeared, supposed to take his music lesson, but he never came out. That is, up to the time w

Two Glasses of Beer

What a Thrifty Wife Can Do

By THOMAS TAPPER.

I.

WE all wish to be rich or well-to-do, yet few are willing to pay the price. Money in hand can be spent for so many things before we know it there is no money left.

Then we wish again that we might be rich or well-to-do.

While many men have written books and articles about how to save money they all give the same rule:

Spend less than you earn.

Now, to obey this rule throw a man back on his will power. He must begin to manage his affairs—if he wants to save money—so that every week-end finds him a little further ahead. It may pinch him and make him deny himself, but if he is serious he will not mind doing these things.

Bulwer once advised young men: "Never treat money affairs with levity, for money is character."

He meant a great deal by this. If a man earns money it is paid to him in exchange for his strength of body and mind. He gives himself for it, and he should not exchange it for things of no worth.

It is probably true, as many writers have said, that earning money is easier than saving it. The right use of money is also a difficult art to learn. It teaches us to give it out for what is worth while, for, as we have seen above, when a man pays out money he is spending the symbol of his own strength.

II.

Of the character that is made by the habit of caring for money rightly, a very remarkable story is told by Samuel Smiles in his book entitled "Thrift"—a book well worth reading.

There was a young man in Manchester, England, who went to work in a calico-printing factory. He earned good wages, and always spent his money as it pleased him, and one of his ways was to buy beer.

On the day this young man married his young wife asked him to let her have enough money to buy two glasses of beer a day for herself. They both worked; he going from the factory to the saloon, and she going from the factory to put the house in order. Occasionally this young wife was able to get her husband to come home a little earlier than usual and spend the hours they had free from work with her instead of with the men who drank beer until bedtime.

On the day they had been married a year, their first wedding anniversary, the husband said:

"Mary, we have had no holiday since we were married. If I had a penny in the world I would take you to visit your mother."

It showed a good heart if not a careful man, and Mary said:

"Would you like to go, John? If so, I'll pay for the trip."

John was amazed, and said:

"How can you pay? Have you a fortune all at once?"

"No," said Mary, "but I've been saving my pint of beer."

"What?" asked John.

"My pint of beer," and with that answer Mary went to the place where she had been hiding her pennies every day and brought the price of seven hundred and thirty glasses of beer—which in those days represented about twenty-one dollars.

She placed all the money in her husband's hands, and said:

"John, we can have a holiday and go to visit mother."

Now, the best part of the story is this: John supposed all the year that Mary was, like himself, spending her pennies for beer that she drank day by day. When he realized what it meant to have pennies in hand, and what it meant to have a wife like Mary, he said:

"I'll never drink again."

And he never did. He and Mary saved their pennies, made little investments carefully, and in a few years they had a country house, carriage and a factory of their own.

Mary was a blessing

III.

We all wish to be rich, or well-to-do, and while we wish it we heartily curse the times and the taxes we must pay. But, after all, we make our own "times" to an extent, and the taxes we impose on ourselves are more than any tax of government. John taxed himself for beer. We all pay this tax in one way or another.

We are all of John's kind. What Mary's thought awakened in John was not only a sense of the worth of money, but a sense of that which the money represented. And the money represented John's labor, strength, skill, time and character. When he saw it in that light he realized how easy it is for a man to be foolish.

Well, no fun, no good times, no little pleasures?

Not first. As a man's money is his character it must be divided and paid out as character demands: First, the bills to be paid, then the amount to be saved, lastly, the money for pleasure—and this money should bring pleasure to all the family, not to one member of it alone.

This kind of earning and spending does not make man a prisoner to life. It makes him free. It cultivates self-denial and self-reliance. It kills debt and the loan shark. When a man needs a little money for a visit on his wedding day, self-denial will have helped him to set it aside.

Mary may put her pennies aside instead of drinking them, but unless John learns the lesson from her and does his share, the burden is not fairly divided. And if John and Mary are to be good companions and helpers of one another, they should divide the cost of sacrifice.

The Vanity Box

A Mystery Story of Absorbing Interest

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments.

SIR IAN and Lady Hereward, while visiting their neighbor, Mrs. Forcetier, learn accidentally of the presence in England of Veronica Ricardo, a beautiful young girl, with whom Sir Ian was infatuated while in India, prior to his marriage.

"I've decided to pay you a surprise visit this very day," says Mrs. Forcetier.

Sir Ian and his wife hasten home to receive Miss Ricardo, but Lady Hereward leave him when half way through the woods to Friar's Moat, explaining that she has some necessary errands to attend to before the arrival of her tenants.

Sir Ian meets Miss Ricardo, whom he has not seen for years. She notices that he seems distressed. She explains that she is visiting her cousin's wife a few miles away, and felt compelled to visit Sir Ian and his wife, who had been her companions in former years.

Mrs. Barnard, wife of Tom Barnard, farmkeeper for the Herewards, is attending to her household duties with little Pepper, six years old, playing at her knee, when Miss Craigie, Lady Hereward's maid, calls to make a visit at the Barnard lodge. Tom Barnard, who was a soldier under Colonel Hereward and imbibes his cold chilliness, is away at the village. The Barnards live under the shadow of an old manor tower, and was built in 67, so fond the countryside a wonderful view of the hills in the distance.

Mrs. Barnard tells Miss Craigie the history of Ian Barr. The old uncle of Sir Ian Hereward married an Italian opera singer. They separated, and then, without warning whatever his first wife was alive or not, old Sir Ian married an Irish barmaid, Miss Barr. Ian, by the latter, the boy taking the name of Barr when he reached the age of twenty-one. He also, while at college, married a barmaid, Miss Kirtlagle, Lady Hereward's maid, calls to make a visit at the Barnard lodge. They separated, and then, without warning whatever his first wife was alive or not, old Sir Ian married an Irish barmaid, Miss Barr. Ian, by the latter, the boy taking the name of Barr when he reached the age of twenty-one. He also, while at college, married a barmaid, Miss Kirtlagle, Lady Hereward's maid.

Mrs. Craigie goes, and shortly afterward Sir Ian appears and asks for Tom. His face is white, and he cries that his wife has been killed. When Tom comes home, they go to the tower, where the former had found the body of his wife. Her jewelry is missing and it looks like robbery and murder.

Miss Ricardo is summoned to the inquest, where Sir Ian is accused by the police of starting with his wife to walk home from Mrs. Forcetier's. He says he left her at the Tower, at her express wish, and went the lower road to Friar's Moat. He also tells of finding Miss Ricardo at his home. He also tells of finding Miss Ricardo at his home years before and that he had met her in India.

He tells of going to seek his wife and finding her body. He had met no one on the way and has no suspects on whom he had a grudge against Lady Hereward. In response to a query by the coroner, he declares that he and his wife were always on the best of terms.

Lianne Craigie, called to the stand, says she thinks Lady Hereward was in love with Sir Ian than he was with her.

THAT was enough for her ladyship. Lianne would get that; and the same with dresses and blouses. Her ladyship would begin to hate a thing if she had the idea that it made her look old; for she really was a bit older than Sir Ian, and extremely sensitive about her age, though very few would have guessed her feeling.

Lianne used to order creams and things for the complexion, or to keep the neck firm, in her own name, but they were really for her ladyship; and it was because of this, as well as little tricks about doing the hair, that her ladyship valued Lianne so much. To Katie's opinion, Lianne was a stupid, worthless creature, but she couldn't say the French girl had any grudge against her mistress.

Lianne disappeared, it is true, but not on account of a "row," so far as Katie knew, and her ladyship was forever quoting Lianne, saying nobody else could do as well as Lianne could, no matter how they might try. Lianne had probably had a love affair, and had wanted to leave her place for that reason, so her ladyship didn't much like such things going on in the house.

As for Sir Ian, he had always seemed very pleasant with his wife, but he didn't have quite the same air of thinking the sun rose and set in her ladyship that she had for him.

He was absent-minded, sometimes, and fond of reading in the library by himself; but they were on very good terms indeed, and in Paris he took his wife everywhere, shopping, and to the theatres, and bought her several handsome presents.

On the last morning of her ladyship's life, Sir Ian had come into her room where she was polishing her nails, and Kate was putting away a few things.

Never Any Dispute

They had talked to each other as pleasantly as possible, and made plans for a few days' stay in town by and by. Her ladyship did not appear to have any trouble or secrets, except some little ones of the toilet, which did not count seriously.

If she had secrets Kate would have been likely to guess, or would have heard something from Lianne, who used to talk rather freely about her mistress in the servants' hall. But Katie believed that Lady Hereward had been a very happy woman up to the day of her death, and was, on the whole, a lady easy to get on with.

The only person Kate had ever heard her speak was Miss Verney, her ladyship's companion.

Had Kate seen Lady Hereward in the woods, on her way to visit Mrs. Barnard? No, she hadn't, nor had any idea her ladyship was there, though she left the farm sooner than she would have liked, perhaps about a quarter after four, in order to reach Friars' Moat by teatime, thinking that her mistress might be back and wanting something then.

She had seen nobody in the woods but Miss Verney. No, not on the way back, but when going to the farm she had seen Miss Verney. On the way back she had met no one—that is, only the footman from Friars' Moat. He had perhaps guessed that she (Kate) would be returning through the woods.

No, she and Edward were not exactly engaged, though they had been near it once. They often had quarrels. Edward was of an odd disposition, and Kate was not sure whether she would do well to marry him or not. Her ladyship had advised her not to encourage him.

Here was another little detail not elicited by the first questioning of Kate Craigie by the police. She had not then mentioned the fact that her ladyship was against the match between her maid and the footman, or that she particularly disapproved of love-making in the servants' hall.

But it was easy to believe that this might have been true, as it was well known that Lady Hereward, despite her many charities, held certain rather strict people called them "narrow-minded") views.

"Nothing of Importance"

The coroner looked perturbed at Kate. Too many unexpected issues seemed to be developing in this case. He felt himself ill-used, in that he had not been sufficiently prepared.

"Did the footman, Edward, know that Lady Hereward wished you to give him up?" was the next question; and it showed Kate the mischief done by her loose way of answering. She had not needed to say that about her mistress and Edward, and she could have boxed her own ears for her carelessness, because, whatever Edward might be, he loved her only too well.

Blushing sinfully, she said Edward had perhaps guessed at her ladyship's disapproval, but it did not discourage him. He was always laughing, and as long as he wasn't discharged, there was not much for him to be cross about.

Had Kate ever heard Edward say anything about Lady Hereward, as if he were angry at her attitude toward him? Well, he might have said little things, like any quick-tempered young man would, in the circumstances, but nothing of importance. She had never thought anything of what he said.

Did he refer to the subject when they met in the woods in the afternoon of the murder? As to that Kate could hardly remember. He might have mentioned it, no more than a few words. What words? Kate was sure—flushing deeply—that she couldn't repeat them. Such words went in at one ear and out at the other.

Had Edward been excited when she met him in the woods?

Dear no, not particularly. He was a bit emotional and always got worked up, on one thing and another, when talking to her, that was all, indeed.

Another new suspicion flung at Kate heads of the jury. Hardly had they recovered from the shock of the first when there came a second; but after the first, it was a relief to have a second to fall back upon. So little importance was poor Edward, a footman, compared with his master, Sir Ian Hereward.

Daysey's Mother Frees Her Mind About Dietary Heroes

THE men appear to be at a decided advantage in photograph albums and in the story books, but they are very unsatisfactory when you get close to them, according to Mrs. Lysander John Appleton.

"There is John Sandish of Illinois," she said, with a shower bath sputter to her indignation, "far off and therefore a hero. What's he done? He is demonstrating the peanut diet, and the world is regarding him as a martyr to science, and he is glorying in his martyrdom.

"Every two hours wise men measure him around the waist, take his temperature, and weigh him on government tested scales, noting the results in great big books.

"Then there is Dr. Landome, of Los Angeles. Know what he's doing? He is trying to prove that the cactus is the ideal food for mankind, as if we didn't have enough things scratching us in our stomachs now.

"The wise men are also measuring him and weighing him, figuring how many cacti per acre will feed everybody in the world for seven years with the fibre of the plant furnishing their clothes, and then this would be an ideal world, for cacti take care of themselves, and all we would have to do would be to gather them, and there would be no more work, no more worry and no more indigestion, and ice cream can be made of the seeds, and goodness knows that these high-browed men haven't made of the spikes and the roots, and that is why Landome is a hero.

"These men are away off in their experiments with a one-thing diet, and, therefore, are heroes, but you get a man in your own family and try him on a one-thing diet, and he nets anything but a hero.

"There's my husband, Lysander John, and there's always fried pontoos for him, and do you suppose he looks upon himself as a demonstrator of a great scientific theory? I should say not! He complains, and the neighbors, instead of getting out their scales and their tape measures and watching him with bated breath, pity him an censure me.

"Why isn't it as important for a man t demonstrate a fried potato diet as to den onstrate a peanut or cactus diet?

"Every woman in the world has a die of potatoes in her pie box. Left over what she could fry in five minutes. Do yo know of any woman with peanuts or ca tus in her refrigerator?

"Do you know of any woman who want to scratch her hand on cactus spikes whe there are no spikes on potatoes?

"Do these men wild-eyed brows know what it will mean to have peanut shell all over the house?

"It's an injustice to me that Lysande John doesn't announce to the scientifi world that he is demonstrating the frie potato diet instead of grumbling over wha is set before him."

DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE STOMACH

The stomach is the seat of digestion, wherein are separated from food the nutritious elements that build and sustain our bodies. When the stomach ceases to change the fat producing elements of food, into muscle and nerve, there comes an excess of fat, where there should be firm, hard flesh. This excess fat collects in most undesirable places, impeding motion until movement becomes an exertion. The layers of fat check the stomach's natural movements for digestion of food—thus increasing the trouble. But so many people have found relief in the famous Marmola Prescription that there is hardly any necessity for obesity. And now that Marmola Prescription Tablets can be had in chocolate, there is even less excuse for two much fat. Dieting and exercise are rendered unnecessary by this new form of fat reduction. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or the Marmola Co., 79 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at 75c the case. They quickly and harmlessly reduce the overfat body at the rate of 10 to 16 oz. a day, improve digestion, clear the complexion and promote bodily health.

CLAUDE!
NOW LOOK DESMOND DARLING, WE'LL HAVE TO STEAL MY ROSAMOND AGAIN, OH, I HATE YOU AND LOVE THIS PICTURE
CLAUDE! I WILL FOR YOU YET YOU BLACK HEART AND YOUR ROSAMOND MUST MAKEY ME IN SPITE OF ALL!
"HERSHFIELD"

At the top of the volcano are Claude and Rosamond. Below on the slopes of the hill are Desperate Desmond and Officer-thirsty Wild Men, bent on capturing the lovers and putting them to torture. It is a situation to daunt even the most heroic—a steaming crater on one side and such implacable foes on the other! Of the two evils, the lovers choose the terror, their will jump false to it to avoid capture.

A brave leap and the lovers are over the edge of the volcano's opening. Down through the steam they plunge to what appears to be certain death. It is some consolation that they are about to die together, but we doubt if it's a whole lot. Suicide pacts, forced or enforced, are never exactly pleasant. But we must admire the heroic spirit which prompts the lovers to prefer death to dishonor.

Ah! What has happened? The steam arising from the crater comes from an illicit still run by moonshiners. Claude and Rosamond do not die after all. Virtue is again rewarded, and vice is punished. The moonshiners are rough men engaged in an illegal occupation, but they have warm hearts and are ready to aid the lovers in eluding Desmond. It is proof that villain betrayed their previous retreat.

In the meantime Desmond believes that he has cornered the lovers in the crater, and that in a few moments they will be again in his power. Exactly he and his fellow villains do not know. After circling the summit of the crater's edge and finding no trace of the lovers, Desmond's sagacity is sweet to the black-hearted scoundrels, who are now decided to villainy to be susceptible to any of the softer emotions.

But what a disagreeable surprise greets the creatures of evil! Just as Desmond and the ferocious Wild Men are about to reach the top of the mountain, up jump Claude and the rough but honest moonshiners and propel barrels of their moonshine down upon their climbing enemies. The barrels are labelled "but" by the screwer, but there is no telling what may happen until we see to-morrow's pictures.

The Value of Home Education

Praise and Encouragement from Parents Found Success for Many Men and Women.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by National News Association.

THERE is no amount of education you can bestow upon your boys and girls, which will make them cultured or well-bred members of society unless you build this groundwork of decent manners and habits in their early youth.

For now the plastic brain cells are being formed, and you are the potter who can shape your children as you will, if you care to spend the great work your careful, loving attention.

I talked recently with a gifted young man, whose only obstacle to great success in his chosen work is lack of self-confidence. This man was brought up by a father who continually ridiculed his son, in early youth, in order to prevent him from becoming egotistical.

Whatever the boy attempted to do the father declared impossible, and laughed at his conceit for supposing he possessed the requisite qualities for such an endeavor.

The son was specially downed by nature and temperament for the dramatic profession and is now playing in third-class companies, whereas he would be capable to be a leading man in the best theatrical companies, had he been encouraged and made to believe in himself.

"Always when I approach a manager," he said, "I shrink in my own estimation, and remember things my father said to me of my egotism and presumption. And the manager, of course, takes his own estimate of myself, and I do not get the role I want."

There are many mothers making the same deplorable mistake with a young daughter.

They are so concerned lest the girl become vain and silly with pride of beauty or attainments that they ridicule her personal appearance and her mental achievements.

The Parents' Duty

A beautiful and accomplished woman assured a friend that she suffered agonies when entering a room because of her mother's attitude during her adolescence.

"The very first duty a parent owes a child is to give that child confidence in itself."

Such confidence is not egotism. It can accompany modesty and humility of spirit, properly developed.

There was a little boy who gave evidence, in early childhood, of unusual literary talent.

"You are gifted by the Creator," his parents told him, "and you will one day make a name which shall be known all over the world. You must study and observe and grow, and write as you feel."

Every crude effort was praised, and the boy grew up with a belief in his talents, which the future justified, and the world acknowledged his gifts in early life.

Praise and encouragement from parents are the foundation of success for many a man and woman; and ridicule and discouragement from the same source have caused many a human being's failure to reach the heights.

Believe in your children and teach them to believe in themselves. It is better than giving them an inheritance of houses and lands.

Children can be educated in the finer things of life, and given high standards without knowing they are being taught, if the parents possess tact and forethought.

As you walk along the streets with your children, what do you talk about?

Do you ever say "You poor" to buy these things, and then do you follow this remark by exclamations of admiration and envy over the handsome equipages, with richly gowned occupants, and say, "It must be lovely to be rich?"

If this is your method of entertaining your children it would be far wiser to leave them at home.

You are educating them in discontent, jealousy and a false idea of what constitutes happiness.

You are awakening a precocious longing for wealth and display and creating those "class distinctions" which so many good people declare are created by the "sensational newspapers."

If you see a man or boy pushing ahead of women through doors or into cars and stages, say to your boy how sorry you would be to have him so rude.

Impress upon him the necessity of politeness and courtesy in public places as an attribute of manliness.

Thank him when he opens a door for you or steps aside for you to enter a car, or when he rises to give another a seat.

In all these small and simple ways you can be giving your children the foundation for a most valuable education.

Let me say, one of the mother to make her children what she desires them to be if she begins early enough and keeps at the task day after day.

A child's brain is being built the first fourteen years of life, and it is the mother's privilege to direct the structure and awaken the noblest and most admirable qualities by giving them thought exercises.

Each thought which passes through a child's mind is leaving its physical impress on the brain and making that thought easier to recur again. Pave the way for good and great thoughts.

Rejoice in willing service;
Who loves will labor most.

The Gun Runner

A Thrilling Story of Wireless and War

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

GUSTAV LING, wireless operator on the Lamilian, goes ashore while his ship is loading at her New York dock and loses his way in a dense fog which comes in from the harbor and envelopes the city. On a side street he meets a beautiful girl whom he has never seen before, but who calls him by name. "I want to talk to you," she says, "I must talk to you alone."

Overcome by shyness, he stares foolishly at the girl for a moment and then turns and flees. He goes a long way and finally, just as a ferry whistle tells him that he is nearing the river, he enters a narrow street, only to find his way blocked by a cab, a cab with an open door.

In the cab sits the woman from whom he had fled. "I waited to warn you," she says, and makes him enter the cab.

"Of what?" he asks, as the cab starts.

"Not a suit on the Lamilian!"

He asks why not and she replies that it will not be safe. He apparently doubts her and she pleads with him. Finally she asks him to kiss her, and as it grieves away from her, throws her arms around his neck. In the midst of his struggles, the cab stops, the door is opened and the man drags him into the street. A crowd gathers and a policeman appears, who begins rubbing his eyes as if awakened. The man appears, who flings off the policeman and puts the dazed operator back into the cab, calling out to the driver:

"To the police station, quick!"

The man who had attached the operator then tells the bewildered policeman that the man who has just driven off in the cab with Ling is one of Wilkie's men and that the wireless is also in the service.

The scene changes to the deck of the steamship Lamilian. A big shouldered man in a raincoat wants to send a message, but the operator tells him the wireless apparatus is out of order and that he can't do any sending until he fixes it.

The captain calls to the operator to hurry up and get his apparatus in shape. Through the mist can be seen an approaching warship. The man in the raincoat paces the deck, now and then stopping to glance in at the wireless apparatus. He finally gets a couple of messages signed Michael Duffy.

The next day the man hangs around the wireless cabin again after asking if there have been any replies to his message. The operator explains to him the workings of the wireless system and the stranger says he wants to send a message to New Orleans to inquire when a shipment of oil will arrive there, as he had at first suspected—but she gave him the impression of being youthfully and buoyantly full-blooded.

Then she stepped boldly in across the high door-sill and held out a tinted formpad sheet to the operator. The solicitously purring stewardess, at a gesture from her benefactor, had already disappeared.

"You are still sending, are you not?" asked the young woman, stepping still nearer the operating-table.

A Bewitching Tone

Her voice betrayed no trace of foreign origin, as McKinnon had at first expected it might. The speech was that of a well-groomed New York girl, the type of girl that McKinnon had so often noted about the Fifth Avenue shops and the theatre lobbies. The voice was the New York voice, yet with a difference. It was the slightest and thinnest substration of accent, of modulation, that made up this difference.

Yet in doing so it imparted to her words a solid and bewitching pertinence of tone that seemed to hint at some indefinably exotic influence of education or environment.

It seemed to impart to her the crisp eloquency of the Parisian, persistently yet delightfully suggestive. There was a softness of poise and movement for some continuous suggestion of emotional fluidness that belied her actual composure. She seemed to be one who would not at first accepted as suddenly but definitely touched with discretion.

Then you are sending," she said, as though in answer to her own question.

"I'm sorry," said McKinnon, backing away from the chair that she might take it if she chose. "I'm sorry, but I've just stopped for the night."

For the first time he was conscious of the fact that he was at work in his shirt sleeves, and that those sleeves were woefully soiled. He took down his coat and struggled into it.

The young woman noticed the movement gratefully and sank into the chair he had abandoned for her.

"You will not get somebody?" she asked. There was no note of pleading in her voice, but the mute appeal in her eyes was there and on his mask him suddenly change his mind.

"I've been having trouble with that timer of mine," he explained. "It's rather hard for me to pick up anything on a thick night like this, you know. But I'll try."

She lent a little to one side as he leaned over the desk and threw the switch-lever. They were side by side, almost touching each other.

Girl Watched Him

"Why is it hard?" she asked.

"It's not easy to explain without being technical, but wireless works heavy in dump weather. You may have noticed it with telephones, even on rainy days."

"Yes, I have," she said with a pleased nod, turning her face from the switch-lever to McKinnon's face.

He caught the key in his fingers and the blue spark once more leaped and exploded across the spark-gap.

The girl watched him with rapt eyes and again parted her lips as she lifted the "set" to his head and listened with the phones pressed against his ears.

If You Had to Live It Over Again

By DOROTHY DIX

No. 6—The Third Woman Tells How She Vainly Tried to Make Her Marriage Happy

"MARRIAGE" said the fifth woman, "was a failure because I believed that I held a divine commission to make over a man—to put my little paper patterns down on his bodily and character and cut them over according to my taste.

"Of course I couldn't do it. No woman can do it. But a great many people try to, and I was one of them. Accordingly at the happiness of married life, and eventually killed love itself, by their ceaseless efforts to make their husbands what they thought they ought to be, and by their ceaseless criticisms and nagging of the things they were and did.

"And it was all in no purpose. Turning a determinate creature into an animal with a backbone is a matter of agony of time. It isn't a process that a little fool like me can accomplish in fifteen minutes. With all the good will in the world I couldn't make any of my husband any more than I could change the color of his hair or the shape of his nose. I couldn't even make him as perfectly wretched and consistently successful in that.

If!

"If I had to live my married life over again I would not try to change a single thing. I should take my husband as I found him and not try to change him. I should not try to live fashionably his height and eyesight and orthodontic outlook on life. I should warm to the fire of his affection and admiration, and bask in the sunshine of his approval.

"In that case I should, at least, get something out of life, while as it was I got nothing but misery and heartache. I would not change him, nor try to change him, I would love him, and how much easier it is to love than to hate!

"In the last day of his life my husband and I were at outs with each other. We had been quarreling all day, and I was in a frenzy of rage with him because he had refused to take me to a dance that I was determined to attend. I would not speak to him, and I would not eat with him, and I would not ride in the car with him, and I would not walk on the same side of the street with him. I was going to show him that I was a free woman, and that he could not dictate to me.

"Of course I was perfectly ridiculous, and I knew it, but I was so angry that I could not see straight, and I was determined to punish him.

"I went to the dance, and I had a good time, and I was glad I had gone, and I was glad I had defied him, and I was glad I had made him suffer, and I was glad I had shown him that I was not afraid of him, but he was not there.

"He had gone home, and he had gone to bed, and he had gone to sleep, and he had gone to sleep forever. He had had a stroke of apoplexy, and he died without ever regaining consciousness.

"I have never had any peace since. I have never had any happiness since. I have never had any forgiveness since. I have never had any rest since. I have never had any hope since. I have never had any joy since. I have never had any love since. I have never had anything since but remorse and misery and heartache.

"I would give my life to have my husband back for one hour, and tell him how much I loved him, how much I admired him, how much I appreciated him, how much I thought of him, how much I depended on him, how much I needed him, how much I wanted him, how much I missed him, how much I mourned him, how much I longed for him, how much I prayed for him, how much I suffered for him, how much I sorrowed for him, how much I repented for him, how much I loved him, how much I loved him, how much I loved him.

"But I can't. He is dead, and I killed him."

Glorious in Youth

"He was one of the sort of men who are glorious in youth and pitiful in old age. The world smiles upon them when they are in their twenties, and laughs at them when they are in their sixties. All of their promises have been blighted in the bud. None have flowered into achievement. Everybody has liked them, but nobody has trusted them with a big job.

"Unfortunately for both of us, I was the complete opposite of my husband in temperament. I was right and narrow and severe. I was fearful of the future and afraid of all kinds of untried theory. I was thrifty and economical, and I was always looking for getting on in the world. I wanted to be rich, to be important, to have my husband take a commanding position in the world of affairs, and to have accomplished that I would gladly have sacrificed my fingers and toes, and lived upon bread and water.

"I thought no man can ever even faintly realize what it means to an ambitious and practical woman to have a husband who will come home to her that she is married to a man who is lazy and shiftless, and whose only aspiration is to escape all of the cares of life and be blissfully content with a full stomach and a warm place in which to take it. It is a revelation that scars the soul to see a man and like her, even if she is a good woman, with a bitterness comparable to that which I had discovered that he were a bandit or a cracksman.

"I thought that from the very time I looked at my husband, strong and healthy and capable of any amount of work, but who talked about the house, as supine as a jellyfish, and made no attempt to climb the ladder of success, just satisfied to make a little and spend it all, and tried to look that we would never come to want, and I felt that I would die of hilarious shame for him.

Tried to Rouse Him

"Then I began my foolish and futile efforts to make him over. I tried to inspire ambition in him. I tried to rouse him to effort. I tried to make him economize, to be prudent and far-seeing.

"I tried to break up all his old companionships, to make him come home at regular hours, to make him quit drinking and playing cards, and wasting his time and money in foolish pleasures.

"The result was that so far as he was concerned I simply alienated him from me. Instead of a wife I became to him simply a feared and abhorred critic and a fault-finder. I never permitted him to rest in peace, and to whom he was forever making little plans to correct all his shortcomings.

"I know now how he must have dreaded to come to meet my accusing eye, how the shadow of my disapproval must have always hung over him, how, at last, he must have been afraid even to get rid of my eternal nagging about those things which he did and which he left undone.

"As for myself, all that I got out of the situation was unending failure and disappointment, and I was always worked up into a ferment of protest. I was trying to do the impossible, reaching for the unattainable, and it kept my nerves always on the ragged edge.

"And it was all to no purpose. Turning a determinate creature into an animal with a backbone is a matter of agony of time. It isn't a process that a little fool like me can accomplish in fifteen minutes. With all the good will in the world I couldn't make any of my husband any more than I could change the color of his hair or the shape of his nose. I couldn't even make him as perfectly wretched and consistently successful in that.

If!

"If I had to live my married life over again I would not try to change a single thing. I should take my husband as I found him and not try to change him. I should not try to live fashionably his height and eyesight and orthodontic outlook on life. I should warm to the fire of his affection and admiration, and bask in the sunshine of his approval.

"In that case I should, at least, get something out of life, while as it was I got nothing but misery and heartache. I would not change him, nor try to change him, I would love him, and how much easier it is to love than to hate!

"In the last day of his life my husband and I were at outs with each other. We had been quarreling all day, and I was in a frenzy of rage with him because he had refused to take me to a dance that I was determined to attend. I would not speak to him, and I would not eat with him, and I would not ride in the car with him, and I would not walk on the same side of the street with him. I was going to show him that I was a free woman, and that he could not dictate to me.

"Of course I was perfectly ridiculous, and I knew it, but I was so angry that I could not see straight, and I was determined to punish him.

"I went to the dance, and I had a good time, and I was glad I had gone, and I was glad I had defied him, and I was glad I had made him suffer, and I was glad I had shown him that I was not afraid of him, but he was not there.

"He had gone home, and he had gone to bed, and he had gone to sleep, and he had gone to sleep forever. He had had a stroke of apoplexy, and he died without ever regaining consciousness.

"I have never had any peace since. I have never had any happiness since. I have never had any forgiveness since. I have never had any rest since. I have never had any hope since. I have never had any joy since. I have never had any love since. I have never had anything since but remorse and misery and heartache.

"I would give my life to have my husband back for one hour, and tell him how much I loved him, how much I admired him, how much I appreciated him, how much I thought of him, how much I depended on him, how much I needed him, how much I wanted him, how much I missed him, how much I mourned him, how much I longed for him, how much I prayed for him, how much I suffered for him, how much I sorrowed for him, how much I repented for him, how much I loved him, how much I loved him, how much I loved him.

"But I can't. He is dead, and I killed him."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE PROPER WAY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:—

For several years I have known a lad whom I met at school.

During that early friendship we agreed nicely, but as we grew to have more friends of the opposite sex, we often had little quarrels. He and his mother live alone, and therefore he does not find it possible to invite me out to the theatre very often; but on several occasions I have met him at parties.

He is a favorite among girls. Nevertheless, at these parties, I receive all his attention.

I will call him Mr. A.

Recently a Mr. B. invited me to a trolley ride given by a club of which Mr. A. is a member. Each was to ask some young lady to attend. At this time, Mr. A. and I had not seen each other for weeks because of business.

I went with Mr. B and was surprised to find Mr. A. there without a young lady. He was also surprised to see me there, more so, because Mr. A. detested B. (I knew of this.)

I really love A., and was nice to him. I danced, walked and chatted with him a good part of the evening with B.'s consent.

Her name, Miss Fairfax, he does everything possible to incur my anger by paying attention to other girls in my presence and practically shunning me. I am not jealous.

Every morning, when I meet him at the station, he is taking some girl to the city. He manages to sit directly in front of me, in the same car, every time, and then shows off his many attentions upon the girl. I simply smile and am friendly "how are you" do.

I have stood it so long that it is now getting on my nerves, and I ask your advice.

On two occasions he saw me speaking to B., but I had not B. only accidentally. B. is absolutely ignorant of the great friendship between A. and myself.

A. is dearer to me than anybody else, and I know he did love me.

What shall I do?

O. G.

I BELIEVE that A. likes you and is acting this way from jealousy. He has seen you with B. quite often and therefore he imagines that you like the other man. He is showing you that he, too, is interested in someone else, hoping to make you realize by this means the possibility of losing him. You did quite right to disguise your feelings toward him and continue to be perfectly friendly. Be kind to him under all circumstances; let him see that you have not changed one jota in the regard you have for him. Take every opportunity to make him realize the depth of your friendship for him. You will accomplish more by tact and perseverance than by any other method.

HIS HABITS WILL CHANGE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Do you believe an American girl can be happy with a foreigner? I have been keeping company with a man two years, and he has asked me to marry him four—and I like him very well. He also loves me, and we intend to be married in six months.

Would it break my lady's table etiquette and way of speaking, which is not thoroughly American, cause me to hate him after a while?

My friends are not ashamed of him, but he means well and I try to think of that always; but their customs are different, and that it is to his advantage to conform to them in order to avoid unfavorable comment.

Offer to help him in this direction, and I am sure he will be most grateful to you.

If you truly love and admire this man, it is quite possible, in time, that the habits which offend you can be changed.

Explain to him that our customs are different, and that it is to his advantage to conform to them in order to avoid unfavorable comment.

Offer to help him in this direction, and I am sure he will be most grateful to you.

INFLAMMATION AND PAIN

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Creston, Iowa.—"I was troubled for a long time with inflammation, pains in my side, sick headaches and nervousness. I tried to be taken so many medicines that I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. A friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to health. I have no more pain, my nerves are stronger and I can do my own work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me after everything else had failed, and I recommend it to other suffering women."

MRS. WM. SEALS, 605 W. Howard St., Creston, Iowa.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

In almost every neighborhood you will find women who have been restored to health by the Pinkham medicines. Inquire among them and see. Many would not have a testimonial published, but would talk about their cure to another woman.

BOSTON AMERICAN FLAG COUPON

Thursday, July 27, 1911.

NOTICE! A complete set consists of seven coupons of CONSECUTIVE dates.

ALL MAIL ORDERS MUST BE SENT TO FLAG DEPT., P. O. BOX 3047, BOSTON. Not responsible for mail orders sent to any other address.

How to get a flag:

Clip seven flag coupons from the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN of consecutive dates. If you wish to have the flag come by mail, send the seven coupons and a postoffice money order for forty-two cents to cover cost of mailing and handling.

If you call for the flag at the Flag Department of the AMERICAN at No. 275 Devonshire street, it will cost you thirty-five cents and seven coupons.

SPECIAL FLAG NOTICE!

The Flag Department has received several hundred remittances from readers who have failed to send their name or address in sending for flags.

If any AMERICAN reader has sent for a flag and has not received it, this may be the reason, and it would be advisable in any such cases to notify the Flag Dept., P. O. Box 3047, Boston, giving the facts and full name and address.

DON'T DELAY A MINUTE

ENTER THE GREAT $10,000.00 Proverb Contest TODAY

The Boston American's Great $10,000.00 Proverb Contest is now in the full, vigorous hey-dey of its youth.

Don't entertain the idea for a minute that the costly prizes which the American offers are out of your reach simply because some of the puzzle pictures have already been printed.

These prizes are just as easily within your reach as they were on the day the contest began.

The American, moreover, has provided every facility for you to get a running start in the contest now, or next week, or, in fact, any time up to the day the last puzzle picture is printed.

The back numbers of the puzzles that have already been published may be had at the "Contest Department," at the regular rates of the American for the days on which the puzzles originally appeared.

Sunday back numbers are 5c (plus return postage); daily back numbers are 1c (plus return postage). You may call for them or order them by mail. The Contest Department is at 275 Devonshire St.

You can get as many or as few of them as you like. Many are ordering complete sets to date, which shows that the interest is spreading fast—that the $10,000 worth of prizes are being realized and appreciated by NEW Contestants all the time.

The back numbers are accompanied by the answer blanks corresponding to each picture. Once you obtain the back numbers to date you are right up with all the earlier starters.

This is not a race! Time has nothing to do with it. It is just a competition of cleverness.

ONE THOUSAND PRIZES

Are they not worth a great deal more than the little mental exercise which is required to solve the seventy-five puzzles which will complete the set?

The popular little official Proverb Books are in greater demand each day.

This volume contains the correct answers to each and every picture which will be used during the contests. It contains over three thousand proverbs and is the one guide to the contests, and the only one on which contestants may rely.

A copy of the PROVERB BOOK will be mailed to anyone who sends a money order for 25c to the "Contest Department, 275 Devonshire St." Those who care to, may call for same at the Contest Headquarters at the same address. Be sure to get the American's PROVERB BOOK.

All things considered, there couldn't be a better time than this very day to begin your march towards the winning of those prizes.

While the Red and Blue troops are fighting the mimic war battle, why shouldn't you fight that—a battle of wits?

Read the prize list over just once more and then solve to-day's picture and send for back numbers and the Proverb Book.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

LEHIGH AGAIN MARKET LEADER

Confidence of insiders to carry stocks very much higher has not been shaken.

$ $ $

Continental markets are unsettled, but the Morocco affair has now reached a crisis and will probably be settled in a few days.

$ $ $

Atchison has less to lose from the immediate application of the rate decision than any transcontinental line. Most probably the ton-mile rate of the Southern Pacific will come down to that of the Atchison, after having held about 15 per cent. higher. This is another reason why dividends common, as predicted often before, may eventually cross Southern Pacific.

$ $ $

For years Can preferred has been moved up and down by the affirmation and denial of reports that the accumulated dividends would be financed. That yarn is in circulation again, but the truest proposition is that as this is the canning season the company is making greater profits than ever before.

$ $ $

Beet sugar is preparing to make some dividend payments to escape retribution at this account. But if Congress really reduces the sugar tariff, American beet sugar cannot compete with that of Germany.

$ $ $

It is possible that the coal stocks are being manipulated again by the same old gang of bankers, but in respectable quarters the opinion is held that the Reading deal will be some new financing by Reading and Lehigh Valley. All the insiders know that it is only a question of time when the coal-carrying railroads will be compelled to separate the coal business from the railroad business. It is now proposed to organize in Pennsylvania a separate coal company for each railroad.

$ $ $

The financial world is demanding more liberal disbursements of earnings, and trouble is ahead for directors who attempt to accumulate unreasonably large surpluses. The American Car and Foundry Company is a concern that has apparently gone outrageously far in fortifying itself with cash. Too much cash in a treasury is a constant temptation.

$ $ $

Pittsburg Coal preferred also has accumulated dividends standings to its credit. The deal with the United States Steel Corporation will enable the company to finance those back dividends. Both Pittsburg Coal preferred and Can preferred are considered good investments every year by first class bankers.

$ $ $

The railroads will organize steamship companies when the Panama Canal is finished, and, having the business organization already perfected, they will get the bulk of the Panama business. Instead of the freight rates being millions of tons across the deserts and the mountains of the far West to reach the ultimate consumers, the freight will be carried from the Pacific coast eastward as far as the deserts and from the Great Lakes, the Atlantic and the Gulf westward to the borders of desolation. Thus every mile of the road will have a greater density of traffic, except the mileage across the deserts, which will be used only for occasional freight and for passengers. This will develop the country much more rapidly than the present system, and all the railroads will share in the new development and will derive greater profit than they do by the present wasteful methods of transportation. The long and short haul abolition is a splendid thing for the railroads and is the birthday of a new era of prosperity.

WOMEN'S DOG SHOW IS SUCCESS

All the women members of the Boston Terrier Club are smiling to-day over the success of their dog show and point with special pride to the fact that the judging was done by a woman for the first time in the club's history. "And there wasn't a kick registered to any of the decisions," they say gleefully.

Mrs. F. A. Dallen was the judge. She is the only woman who has judged a four-point specialty show in the United States.

Lexington Park inn was crowded by the exhibitors and their guests. The seven participants were as well represented as the women, despite the fact that the show was in the hands of the fair sex. The exhibitors came from all over New England.

In the special prize class, Sudnury Nemo, owned by J. Magans of Boston, was awarded a trophy as the winner of most prizes in all classes for dogs, while Dork Burns Girl of the Dork Kennels of Fayville, won a similar trophy as the bitch winning most prizes.

Yankee Doodle Pride, owned and exhibited by Mrs. P. P. Kendall of the Kill Kare Kennels of Lexington, won the judge's trophy as the best Boston terrier bitch, while Yankee Doodle Did, also owned and exhibited by Mrs. Kendall, won the Dr. C. E. De Minic prize as the best Boston terrier dog. The W. H. Sawyer prize for the best bred by exhibitor was won by Kill Kare Waggles of the Kill Kare Kennels.

Champion Jolly Widow, owned by Dana D. Brayton, called forth many favorable comments from the members.

1912 MODELS IN GLIDDEN TOUR

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Glidden tour will be held some time in September, exact date to be announced on August 1. The tour will take place over the route originally chosen, from Washington to Ottawa. Thirty entries must be received in order for the tour to start.

The entry by the United States Motor Company of three Maxwell 1912 stock models confirms the view, which originally prompted the postponement of the tour to a Fall date in order to render available the 1912 models of the various makers. Many manufacturers are now registering their 1912 models, and the tour will afford an opportunity for their demonstration.

As previously announced, manufacturers may make their declarations for the tour up to August 1. The following entries have been received: 1911 Cunningham, model "D" (pneumatic); 1911 Oakland, model "M"; 1911 Ohio, model "40"; 1911 Reo (Detroit), model "B-11" (three cars); 1911 Washington, model "D-40"; 1911 McIntyre, model "M-6," and 1912 Maxwell (three cars).

The speed ordinances in the city of Norwalk, Ct., are being strictly enforced, and this applies particularly to the passing of standing trolley cars at a speed greater than three miles an hour and to the speeding rule against reckless driving. It is understood that anything over five miles an hour at the corner of Main and Wall streets shall be considered reckless driving.

Civilization and Christianity Should Cry Halt to Turkish Butcheries of Christians

Never in all his crimson history has the Unspeakable Turk illustrated such relentless cruelty to Christians as in the recent savage butcheries in Albania.

They shock a universe grown familiar even with Turkish atrocities.

Women outraged wherever they are found; nuns garbed in the sanctity of their robes ravished upon sight; little children tossed from soldier to soldier upon the murderous points of bayonets before their frenzied mothers' eyes; whole families roasted in houses set on fire to burn them; multitudes living in caves and holes in the hills, and thousands of men and women starving by choice rather than trust to the fiendish mercy of the Turkish soldiery!

Human history has scarcely a parallel to the monstrous spectacle which curdles the blood of this twentieth century civilization.

AND ALL BECAUSE THESE ALBANIANS ARE CHRISTIANS!

The appeal rises to the Christian world to protest and save its own. For centuries the Turks have been massacring Christian men, butchering Christian children and outraging Christian women SIMPLY BECAUSE THEY ARE CHRISTIANS.

It is high time that Christian people were heard throughout the world in thunder tones compelling the nations to act.

If these Turkish monsters should butcher English subjects BECAUSE THEY WERE ENGLISH, the English "dreadnoughts" would storm the Dardanelles to batter down the mosques and minarets of Constantinople.

If they were Frenchmen murdered BECAUSE THEY WERE FRENCH, the chivalric blood of France would leap to avenge the butchery of its people.

If they were Germans massacred SIMPLY BECAUSE THEY WERE GERMAN, William the Second would voice his protest in an iron hail of cannon.

BUT BECAUSE THEY ARE CHRISTIANS, the Christianity of England and France, and Germany, and Italy, and Russia, and America hold their hands in apathy and mumble maudlin words of markets, and mouth the ancient fetich of the balance of power into the dying ears of Christian martyrs in this Albanian holocaust.

As England protects Englishmen, as France protects Frenchmen, as Germany cares for Germans, so all Christianity should rouse itself and care for Christians.

Time was when for a sentiment of religion Peter the Hermit roused Christendom to the redemption of the Holy Sepulchre, and the Crusades struck the shackles from woman and the century.

Time was when Richard Coeur de Lion led the English speaking hosts of Christendom in a cause not more noble nor half so appealing as this which calls the Christian world to action here.

Does it need a new Crusade to call a halt to this century-old butchery by Turks of Christians?

Pius X., the great head of the Catholic Church, has sounded an appealing note through the AMERICAN. Every Catholic Church in Christendom should make answer to that cry.

The Protestant churches of Europe and America should take up the evangel with the same splendid zeal which they have ever given to the defending of their faith.

And the sentiment of the whole Christian world should be aroused to awaken the Christian nations to active and united protest against these Albanian butcheries, which are simply the repetition of other Turkish massacres which have stained the Christian centuries past, and which unchecked are the crimson promise of other and greater Turkish atrocities which are to stain the Christian centuries to come.

The appeal is universal. Humanity appeals to the human; civilization appeals to the civilized and Christianity appeals to every Christian to help now to halt Turkey in its crimson march of bloodshed and butchery down this Christian century.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

SUSPENDERS AND BELTS.

Editor AMERICAN:

The hot weather still hanging about us has made appearance in shirtsleeves an absolute necessity in the case of hosts of men and has been common in our streets, in our offices, in public libraries and other public places.

Very recently, on one of the most oppressive days, a gentleman of literary record and attainments entered Bates Hall, in our Public Library for the purpose of consulting certain authoritative works.

He noticed not far from him a young man in outing costume, destitute of coat or vest and displaying an emphatic negligee white shirt. The library using no fans or other means of cooling its dead air, the literary gentleman removed his own coat, for the sake of insufferably hot. Presently down came an assistant and said: "I fear I must ask you to put on your coat. Suspenders you know, suspenders."

"Oh, you draw the line there, do you?" said the gentleman rising.

"Yes," remarked the apparently shocked assistant, "Suspenders."

The gentleman left the books where they were and at once left the building. On his way out he noticed that an elderly man, apparently a working man, had pocketed the insult and was putting on a coat which would doubtless soon drive him away, by its heat. The young man in full negligee shirtsleeves remained, doubtless in cool quiet, to enjoy his reading.

Is such snobbery as this to be tolerated in a library paid for by the public? Is a boy who wears a "society" belt to be allowed the full privilege of the library while men who prefer suspenders are driven out—all alike in "shirtsleeves?" The thing is so effeminately British as to be scarcely credible, but such is the rule. The authorities deserve a sharp rebuke and should be compelled either to provide abundant measures for cooling the library (which would abolish shirtsleeves altogether), or to give the same privilege to the working person which is given to the carefully protected negligee belt wearer. Let the AMERICAN expose and ridicule this bit of aristocratic pretentiousness in the people's library.—CITIZEN.

THE RULE OF THE TRUSTS

Editor AMERICAN:

In Friday night's American was an article by the eighty-two-year-old head of the Sugar Trust in which he says the government should let the trusts alone and not interfere in their unlawful combinations and schemes, as the trusts are more powerful than the people, though he admits that the people are the governments and according to his ideas the country is governed in the interests and for the advantage of the trusts and they are more powerful than the government. Who is it this grand country belongs to, the eighty-two-year-old head of the Sugar Trust or the people or descendants of the people who made it free from English rule? The time is fast coming when they who have been pushed into the last ditch by low wages and high cost of living caused by unlawful combinations and schemes will rise up in their might.

The people are fast learning that the men they elect to office do not represent them but are tools of the great trusts and monopoly interests and that they are paid for looking out for the interests of the money kings. If this is the case, the war of 1776 was fought in vain and we are not a free and independent people, but subjects of King Monopoly, otherwise the trusts. Is it possible that this eighty-two-year-old man, head of the Sugar Trust, is more powerful than the government, otherwise ninety millions of people?—Jamaica Plain. PAUL FREEMAN.

PEN MIGHTIER THAN SWORD

General Miles and Captain Hobson to Edit Next Sunday's War Game Edition of the AMERICAN.

While the war clouds gather thick and black over Europe, the people of New England should not forget that right here at their front door is being played one of the biggest and most unique war games, in many respects, that this country has ever seen.

Off the Massachusetts coast, in the vicinity of Provincetown, the navy is participating in some wonderful and brilliant manoeuvres. Big battleships with giant guns and great speed slip over the waters and roar forth missiles of destruction that would blow any sort of craft out of water.

Then there are cruisers, torpedo boats, torpedo boat destroyers and that new wonder of naval warfare that darts secretly under the water and bobs up unexpectedly—the submarine boat. A sufficiently large fleet of submarines, such as are being tried in North Atlantic waters, could sink the most formidable navy in the world.

In Massachusetts the biggest State war game ever set in motion is on, and the reports are that the Blue and Red boys are showing that they are soldier timber of the highest grade.

This is probably the first time that a State has carried out a war game of such proportions alone. Here all of the soldiers engaged belong to the militia of Massachusetts. They are divided into two camps and face each other in mimic battle.

And one of the strange reports from the camps is that the boys are so earnest and so enthusiastic that they take the war game almost as seriously as though it were real. That's the spirit that makes real soldiers!

In view of the widespread interest in, and real importance of these naval and military manoeuvres, next Sunday's AMERICAN will be a WAR GAME EDITION.

General Nelson A. Miles, the brilliant soldier and graphic writer, and Captain Richmond P. Hobson, the Spanish-American War hero, will edit the war game news for this edition of the AMERICAN.

Each of these distinguished war experts will contribute articles bearing upon the militia and the naval manoeuvres, General Miles writing about the advantage of the militia and Captain Hobson about that of the navy activities.

The WAR GAME EDITION of the Sunday AMERICAN will contain the best written and best illustrated account of the great land and sea war game of the week that will be published anywhere, and everybody that loves a soldier or a sailor will want a copy of this paper. Order next Sunday's AMERICAN TO-DAY.

Falling like dew upon a thought, produces

Freddy Funnel's Letter

By MILES OVERHOLT

Shotgunville, Nev., July 8.

DEAR FERDY:

Well, I've joined 'em, Ferdy, I've joined the wild bunch. I am out on my step-uncle's ranch. A step-uncle, Ferdy, is a step in the wrong direction. It is a cellar step with a tired banana on it.

Dad sent me down here to get rest and quiet. My nerves, it seems, have been shattered ever since the time I refuse to mention, when I dropped 'em somehow and beat 'em, to say the least. And the least is plenty. I get quite nervous and ladylike, and would cry and become insulted on the slightest provocation. I remember, too, that I wanted to vote. It was almost awful. So I'm out here for my health.

Did you ever see a cowboy cow? Or boy? Or whatever it is? Well, I did it yesterday. You see, Ferdy, I arrived only two days ago, and uncle gave me a horse to ride, and the cowboys insisted that I join 'em in a little marking-down-goods tour—branding they call it, I believe. You see, Ferdy, they catch an infant cow and burn the cost price, or something, on the leather in which it is encased. Then they can sell right off the reel how much it is worth. Oh, I know the cattle business. I used to drink milk.

Well, I went with them. The horse went by the name of Hallelujah. That was his first name. He looked something like my uncle and something like he didn't care if he did. Anyway, he was a real lively wagon, and when I got aboard him he stuttered with his hind feet so earnestly that I got off. He was a self-acting horse, and when I discounted I forgot to shut off the power, and he ran into a herd of cattle and scared 'em so much that they stampeded. A stampede, Ferdy, is something like a bargain sale just after the doors are open.

Well, the boys caught Hallelujah and held him while I climbed on, and then we all chased after the bargain rush. It took us quite a while to catch up with it, but we succeeded, and then we applied the brakes and started that "lowing herd winding slowly o'er the lea." Catch that? I learned it from a library book that I had to read to prove to a little brunette who was operating that department of the library that I wasn't coming down to her desk every few hours for my health.

We must have driven the herd about two miles, when Hallelujah thought of something he forgot to attend to before he came away from the ranch, and he kicked up his heels and did a few other little music hall stunts, and then ran through that lowing herd like a pay car bust a tramp. When he found a good granite boulder that he thought would answer the purpose, he extricated me from the saddle, and me and the boulder met for the first time. We were thrown into each other's society till you would have thought we were brothers.

Then the flood came, and my ark was sailing, sailing away. There were two million nine hundred and sixty-eight thousand four hundred and eighty-six cows jumping over me and the boulder before the boys found me, and I was beginning to fear that each succeeding moment would be my supreme one, when I was picked up and brought safely to shore.

The bargain rush was on again, and the boys told me to walk ahead while they brought back the ninety-and-nine that were rapidly straying from the fold. Now, Ferdy, whenever I walk it is in a somnambulistic state exclusively, so I sat down on the sand and waited for something to happen. Reinforcements came in the shape of uncle and a buckboard.

Uncle has a fierce temper. It seems that cowboys are paid their salaries mainly to keep the cattle from stampeding, and I get the blame for stirring up strife among the herd and causing it to strike. You would have thought, to hear him talk, that I was a walking delegate of Bovine Union No. 41144.

As I pen these lines, Ferdy, the cows are still running. Anyway, the boys came back without them. And that's why I'm resting.

Yours,

FREDDY.
